Seized Men Plotted 'Amazing' Campaign Of Sabotage and Terrorism in U. S.

(Pictures on Page 2.)

By J. L. Pearlman
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, June 28.—Arrest of "several more" persons in connection with the captured band of eight submarine-landed Nazi saboteurs was announced tonight by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. More arrests are expected to follow.

Announcement of the new arrests was made by a spokesman for FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover at the New York Headquarters of the Department of Justice.

Those newly arrested, the spokesman said, were "contact men" who were to aid the eight specially-trained saboteurs landed on Long Island and at Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., from German submarines. Apprehension of these eight key men in the sabotage plot and details of their planned campaign of destruction and terror in the United States were announced by Hoover last night.

Identity and number of the latest persons apprehended were not divulged, nor did the FBI reveal where or how the new arrests had been made.

More Arrests Expected

"These people," the FBI spokesman said, "were associates of the eight men previously taken into custody, or had been contacted by various of the saboteurs after they were put ashore."

In response to a question as to whether the new arrests completed the smashing of the saboteur gang, the spokesman stated:

"More arrests may be made."

Recovery of about $30,000 more in cash also was revealed by the FBI tonight, in addition to the amazing sum of $149,748.76 found on the eight men put ashore from U-boats.

Whether the additional money was in the possession of the "contact men" or a new cache of the original eight had been discovered was not stated.

A new insight also was given into the thoroughness with which the German high command had outfitted the eight saboteurs, with the disclosure that each of the eight men carried a forged selective service card and a social security card.

These cards, it was stated, had been supplied the saboteurs at the "sabotage school" outside Berlin where all had undergone intensive training for their terroristic mission in the United States.

How Did FBI Find Trail?

[The intriguing question of how the FBI learned of the landing of the saboteurs remained unanswered last night so far as the public was concerned, but that agency's success in rounding up the Nazi agents so speedily was taken as another demonstration of the effectiveness of this country's counterespionage system. It was recalled that for months

Widow Jilts Haupt, One of 8 Seized Spies

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 28.—The fiancee of one of eight Nazi saboteurs who landed on the East Coast from German submarines said tonight that she was "ashamed and through with him" and that she "had a hunch something was wrong."

The woman, Mrs. Gerba Melind, 24, a widow of four years and beauty operator in a Loop hotel, said in an interview that she was to have been married next week to Herbert Hans Haupt, 22, one of two saboteurs arrested here yesterday.

She said she met Haupt, a former ROTC cadet, about three and a half years ago, and had discussed marriage. About a year ago, she added, Haupt suddenly announced he was going to "visit California," and with the exception of a single postcard from St. Louis, soon thereafter, she hadn't heard from him or learned his whereabouts until this week.

She said Haupt's mother, Erma, telephoned her last Tuesday, saying: "Herbert's back, but he doesn't say anything. I don't know where he's been. All I know is that he's terribly nervous."

Mrs. Melind said she saw him at dinner at his parents' home that Guard Saw U-Boat Land Spies on L. I.

By International News Service

New York, June 28.—An unarmed Coast Guardsman, patrolling a lonely beat on Long Island's south shore, was reported tonight to have witnessed the landing of the four Nazi saboteurs put ashore from a submarine at Amagansett Beach June 13.

According to the report, which FBI officials would neither confirm nor deny, the U-boat surfaced about 400 yards from shore, and the saboteurs rowed to land in a small rubber boat.

The Coast Guardsman, it was said, was overpowered by the four saboteurs in a brief struggle. They discussed in German what to do with him, then finally offered to let him go if he would "forget" about the incident. As a bribe—the Coast Guardsman pretending to fall in with the proposal—they gave him $270.

As soon as he was able, however, the Coast Guardsman reported the presence of the saboteurs to his superiors, and Federal investigators were immediately assigned to the trail.

The four, as announced by FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover last night, were speedily rounded up, as was the second group of four saboteurs landed June 17 at Ponte Vedra, Fla.

Details of the Coast Guardsman's capture were not given, but it is reported he had observed the entire landing operation, including the burying by the saboteurs of various explosives and sabotage instruments. His story of the happening, it was reported, was a major factor in the quick apprehension of the entire gang.

Congress Faces Night Sessions On Funds Jam

Conference Disputes Holding Up Five Regular Supply Bills

By William F. Arbogast
Associated Press Staff Writer

Congress found itself confronted yesterday with the prospect of a call for overtime work to break a legislative jam of appropriations bills for operation of half a dozen Government agencies in the fiscal year beginning Wednesday.

Five regular supply bills are tied up by disagreements between the Senate and House, and on some of them the chances for reaching an early agreement are not so bright.

Should the bills not be enacted by midnight Tuesday, the agencies involved technically would be without funds to start the fiscal year.

Though money could be made available to them by a resolution authorizing continuance of present operations, congressional leaders indicated they would try to push the bill through before the deadline by holding night sessions if necessary.

War Funds Biggest Problem

Further Senate consideration of the regular appropriations measures will be delayed for action first on a 43-billion-dollar war supply bill—biggest in history,—and both House and Senate must dispose of a supplemental appropriation measure carrying almost two billion dollars for miscellaneous war agencies.

The House is scheduled to act on the latter bill tomorrow and the Senate expects to pass the big war supply measure at the same time.

Heading the bills still in disagreement is the 680-million-dollar Agriculture Department appropriation, on which conferees from the Sen-

Pushed Back Near Kharkov, Foe Starts Drive In Kursk Area

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Monday), June 29. The Germans have opened a third major summer front with an offensive from the key strongpoint of Kursk, 280 miles south of Moscow, while pouring more and more men against the Russian defenses in the Kharkov and Sevastopol battles, the Russians reported early today.

(The Germans apparently sprang their new drive from strong entrenchments from which the Red army never was able to dislodge them during its great counteroffensive of last winter and early spring, which regained so much territory elsewhere.)

"During June 28, in the Kursk direction, fighting commenced with the German troops who had gone over to the offensive," the Soviet Bureau of Information said in its midnight communique.

Repulsed at Sevastopol

As the siege of Sevastopol went into its twenty-fifth day, the Russians declared that the "historic defenders" of that torn Crimean port "are repulsing furious enemy attacks."

The Soviet Bureau of Information said that in one sector at Sevastopol the Germans "succeeded in somewhat pressing our units." (Just what was indicated by this admission was not further stated.)

"On all other sectors the enemy attacks were repulsed with enormous losses to him," the communique added. One unit alone was said to have thrown back 16 enemy attacks in three days.

The Germans have announced that the operations in the Kharkov front have been successfully concluded but Russian battlefield dispatches refuted this with reports that the Red Army was counterattacking heavily in several areas and forcing the Germans to retreat.

Strategic Town

Kursk, strategically important, is on the Moscow-Crimean railroad. It is about 125 miles north of Kharkov and the report of the new fighting is evidence that the German high command is progressively putting on the pressure in a northward trend.

The Kursk Province, a predominantly agricultural region just north of the Ukraine, is cut by numerous river and stream valleys. The Germans swarmed into it in their great Donets Basin drive last fall.

The city, whose prewar population was 100,000, is on a line with Stalino, Kharkov, Orel and Moscow and was important for its railway communications, artificial rubber factory, and cartridge and antitank gun works.

The Red forces destroyed 384 enemy planes last week against Soviet losses of 171 planes, the communique reported.

The dispatches from the Kharkov front said the Russians with tanks, guns, planes and even an armored train, slashed at the new enemy lines jutting out from Kharkov and that the horizon was black with the smoke of burning German tanks.

Navy Raises Toll of Japs At Midway

Carrier Sinkings Now Put at 4; 275 Planes, Most of Crews Lost

By Eugene Burns
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pearl Harbor, T. H., June 28.—At least 10 Japanese ships were sunk in the battle of Midway, including four aircraft carriers, and at least eight others damaged, the Navy announced today in a summary which made the Japanese losses even more staggering than as first reported.

Sunk besides the carriers were two 8500-ton cruisers, three destroyers, and one or more transport or cargo vessels. A fourth destroyer was listed as probably sunk.

Damaged were two or three battleships, one of them severely, three or four heavy cruisers, one light cruiser, and four transport or cargo vessels. Another transport or cargo vessel was listed as probably sunk.

Plane Crews Lost

Destroyed with the carriers were about 275 planes, together with their crews.

The statement was the Navy's first in the battle fought in the Mid-Pacific early this month. Most of the losses had become known piecemeal, but the announcement sharply contrasted with the tally of June 10, several days after the battle. At that time enemy losses were listed as two and possibly three carriers and one destroyer sunk, and three battleships and eight to 11 other ships damaged.

The carriers sunk were named in the Navy's statement as the Akagi and Kaga, ships of the 26,900 tons, and the Soryu and Kiryu, of 10,050 tons.

American ship losses in the battle have been listed as one destroyer sunk and one carrier damaged.

The Navy's statement said:

"An analysis of all reports now permits the announcement of a more complete list of losses inflicted on

East's Worst Gas Shortage Hits Thousands

Price Administrator Henderson's statement that car owners "will do a lot more walking from now on" was in full evidence yesterday as the National Capital, along with the entire Eastern seaboard, struggled through the worst "gasless" weekend in history.

While some stations may have fuel for sale today, the motoring public will have to pay 2½ cents per gallon more for it. Simultaneously, users of domestic fuel oil and kerosene will pay 2 cents per gallon more for those products.

The price boost has been passed along to the consumer, due to increased overland transportation costs, it was stated by the Price Administrator Saturday.

Station Open, Sells Out Fast

With one exception, Washington gas stations were closed yesterday. A dealer at Twelfth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest announced he would open at noon with a limited supply of gas. More than 50 cars were lined up waiting, and within 25 minutes his 200-gallon supply was exhausted.

More than half of the local stations would be out of gas today, the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association reported, while the others were conserving their few trickles to carry them through to Wednesday, when they obtain their first July allotments.

Some 200 dealers in the rationed area, meeting at Asbury Park, N. J., to seek relief from the motor fuel drought, meanwhile heard Sol A. Herzog, general counsel of the Eastern Seaboard Retail Gasoline Dealers Conference, criticize as a "farce" the permanent coupon rationing system which goes into effect July 22.

Sees No Improvement

Predicting the new system would be no improvement over the old, he said of the present setup: "There were more tickets sold for the ball than there were seats."

Chinese Fliers Strike Telling Blows at Japs

Strafe Ground Forces, Cause Heavy Losses; Linshien Recaptured

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 28. — Central News, official agency of the Chinese government, said today that the Chinese air force, attacking Japanese positions in Eastern Kiangsi Province last Tuesday, inflicted heavy losses on personnel and considerably damaged military installations.

This was the first elaboration on the Chinese air force's initial offensive activity after nearly five years of war in which it lacked a real air arm, save for the American Volunteer Group, which made its debut in the Battle of Burma and is now tutoring China's airmen.

Bare mention of the attack was made last week.

200 Casualties Caused

They blew up pontoon bridges across the Fu River tributary, causing more than 200 casualties, Central News said.

Elaborating on an earlier announcement, the official Central News agency said Chinese airmen sent two warships to the bottom of the Yangtze River last Sunday at Sinti, 65 miles southwest of Hankow in Hupeh Province.

On the same day A. V. G. fighter planes, converted into bombers, raided Hankow, sinking a Japanese warship and three transports and destroying military establishments in that Hupeh River port and greatest interior Chinese city, held by the enemy since 1938.

The Chinese, who up to now have been having to take Japan's indiscriminate air attacks without striking back, saw in their own growing air force fulfillment of United States pledges of aid in the air against the Japanese.

Henan Town Retaken

News of the aerial blows to the invader were coupled with an official announcement of the recapture of Linshien, in Honan Province, last Tuesday.

The high command said 1000 Japanese were slain or wounded in this operation and that more casualties were inflicted when Chinese forces

RAF Rekindles Bremen Fires In Vast Raid

Little Now Remains Of Great Nazi Port, London Believes

By the Associated Press

London, June 28.—The R. A. F. rekindled the smouldering fires of devastated Bremen overnight in the second massive assault within three days upon that spawning ground of submarines and today the word in London was:

"There can't be much left of Bremen."

The air ministry—without disclosing just how many planes participated in this return raid upon Germany's second largest port, said it was made by a "strong force," the same phrase used to describe obliteration raids by more than 1000 bombers Thursday night against Bremen and earlier against Cologne and Essen.

Ninety-fifth Raid on Port

New big fires were added to those still burning from the last attack Thursday night, the air ministry said of this ninety-fifth R. A. F. assault upon the port.

Night raiding British squadrons, mostly American-made and R. A. F.-manned Bostons, blasted other places in northwest Germany, air fields and war plants of inland and coastal France and Nazi shipping in the Channel. The Lannion Airdrome, in Brittany, came in for a particularly violent attack. One enemy ship was bombed and left aflame off Cherbourg.

The operations cost the British 11 planes—9 bombers and 2 fighters—the Air Ministry announced. The German radio claimed destruction of 14 R. A. F. craft.

Raiders Strike England

Nazi raiders struck overnight at a town in southwest England on the Bristol Channel and a single attacker loosed a stick of bombs which caused casualties and considerable damage in a south coast town.

Stockholm dispatches told, meanwhile, of heavy damage inflicted upon Germany's war plants by the systematic British raids on Hitler's big industrial centers.

As at Cologne and Essen, these accounts said Thursday night's 1000-odd plane attack on Bremen left great factories in ruins. Last night's attack there thus followed the now familiar R. A. F. pattern of a sec-

8th Army Meets Rommel's Force In Wild Melee Near Matruh

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, June 28.—The battle for Egypt raged furiously in the desert cauldron southwest of Matruh today with the reinforced Allied army grimly holding its main positions against the mechanized might of the Axis Africa Corps in a wild melee, the outcome of which may decide the fate of the Middle East and the length of the global war.

The desperate battle was joined by the full forces of both sides Saturday afternoon, spurted fitfully throughout the night, and was renewed with redoubled energy at dawn today.

Out of the confusion of thundering artillery and clanking tanks, it was impossible tonight to tell how the tide of battle was turning or in what direction the milling masses of men and metal were moving.

Mainly Tanks Vs. Guns

The fighting, extremely fluid in character, consisted largely of terrific duels between artillery and tanks. Thus far, as the battle raged unabated, there has been comparatively little pitched fighting between opposing tanks.

Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel struck toward Alexandria and Suez with the full weight of three armored divisions backed by infantry and artillery. Some positions west of Matruh were by-passed, but the main Allied positions held firmly intact.

[The Spanish press carried a report attributed to the New York correspondent of the EFE agency—unconfirmed from any other source—that United States troops now face Rommel. United States supply troops are in Egypt behind the battlelines, but there have been no authoritative accounts that American Army forces are in the battle.]

British Turn on Nazis

The main force of Rommel's attack was met by the British Eighth Army, and British forces a little later launched a counterattack against the armored forces which had by-passed positions west of Matruh.

[Some concern was expressed in Cairo that this Axis column, reported to number some 50 tanks or more, planned to skirt the Quattara Depression to the south, then penetrate into the green Valley of the Nile itself, to harass British installations and supply lines, the International News Service reported.

[The United Press said military commentators already were discussing whether Matruh, the only extensive source of fresh water on the Western Egyptian Coast, was worth holding as a static defense point at the risk of having the British army bottled up.]

The official British communique

Serb Guerillas Using Planes Against Nazis

London (Monday) June 29 (U.P.)—The Moscow radio disclosed today that Gen Draja Mikhailovic's guerilla armies in Yugoslavia now are using planes against the Axis occupation forces, particulary in the Croatia area, where the Croat Quisling government is in constant fear of raids by guerilla pilots and has been forced to take defensive measures."

The Germans and Italians were said to have organized special air units to combat the air guerillas.

Yugoslav quarters here disclosed that Mikhailovic's forces appropriated several planes when the Germans invaded the country and kept them hidden until they could obtain gasoline, which recently came into their hands by the unique method of swapping Italian prisoners for fuel.

Into America's vast, expanding war scenery yesterday stepped a man with the letter "G" on a pair of silver wings.

A fair-sized legion will grow up about him, a legion of cold nerve which must land every time with a dead stick—America's new glider pilots. The first of them, this man yesterday, got his wings with a "G" superimposed, before an audience of 25,000 persons at the National Airport.

There have been glider pilots before, of course, but the War Department had not authorized their silver wing insignia. The first pair was pinned on Sergt. William T. Sampson, 23, graduate of the Elmira Glider School, by Capt. Don M. Hamilton, United States Army Air Forces, establishing the new insignia for sergeant pilots in the United States Air Forces.

Sampson, a few minutes before, had shown the 25,000 civilians—a record crowd at the Airport—and some 490 recruits for the Air Force who were sworn in en masse, how to make a glider behave.

Floating his craft silently in tow behind an American L-1A, now a liaison plane with a tow-hitch in the tail for glider work, Sampson cut loose, circled widely and came into

Three More U.S. Vessels Sunk; One Ship's Entire Crew Lost

By the Associated Press

A Gulf Coast port, June 28.—Thirty-three officers and men—the entire crew of a medium-sized American cargo ship—died when their vessel was sunk in the Gulf of Mexico June 22, a "flaming mass," the Navy announced today. Most of them were Texans.

Navy surface craft and planes racing to the spot where the ship had been seen afire found only a great column of black smoke, part of a life preserver bearing the name of the vessel, and a small work-boat, unoccupied and unmarked.

There had been no distress call from the ship, and the manner of attack has not been learned.

The sinking was the eighteenth in the Gulf as announced by Eighth Naval District headquarters, and the first from which there have been no reported survivors.

It was one of 3 sinkings of United States merchant ships announced today by the Navy Department, bringing to 320 the number of such losses since Pearl Harbor.

The other two ships, one small and the other medium-sized, were "sunk several weeks ago by enemy submarine action several hundred miles off the Atlantic Coast," the Navy said.

Survivors from the small ship were taken to an East Coast port and survivors from the other were landed at a Gulf port.

Ten of the crew of 40 of the medium-sized vessel died in the torpedo blast that sank their ship on June 18 and another died aboard a raft. Only 10 of 38 crewmen on the smaller ship are known to have survived.

U. S. Jeep Joins Red Army, Takes Russian Mud in Stride

By the Associated Press

With the Red Army, June 28.—The American jeep, has met the Russian mud and the situation is well in hand.

The tough little car has joined its big brothers—the United States tanks and planes—in service on the Eastern Front and Russian soldiers said today they like it a lot.

One correspondent rode in one of the queer little vehicles on his way to see an artillery regiment behind the central front. It splashed through puddles of mud, churned across fields and rolled up to headquarters without a hitch.

"How do you like the jeep?' the driver was asked.

"Zamechatelno," answered the Russian. Thats the equivalent of "swell."

The jeeps have been in Russia several months, being distributed all along the front, but today was the first time the censor would allow disclosure of their presence. The artillery regiment visited used them principally for carrying personnel and antitank guns.

"It goes anywhere under any conditions," the commander of the artillery regiment, Viktor Georgevich Tikhonov, said. He suggested that more spare parts were needed and that tire pumps were also lacking.

"We know you want to help us and we are already feeling the effects of your aid," he said. "We hope the aid will go on and increase."

Calm Britain Awaits Churchill's Report

But Not War's End

Second Front Near, Some Senators Say

By the Associated Press

The promise by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of coming operations to divert German strength from the attack on Russia was widely interpreted in Congress yesterday as meaning a second land front would be established soon.

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, who took this viewpoint, predicted the next six months would be the most critical period of the war.

"If Germany can be thwarted of her objectives in that period of time, she will lose the chance of winning," he told reporters.

"That does not mean," he said, "that the war may not continue for a long, long time. But from the standpoint of the United Nations, this most crucial period is beginning now."

Ball Foresees Delay

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire agreed with George's estimate that the establishment of a second land front was imminent, but Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota said he felt that United Nations operations must largely be confined to holding actions for the next six months. After that time, he predicted, men and materials would be distributed to the fighting fronts in sufficient numbers to turn the tide to the offensive.

Calling the Roosevelt-Churchill summation of their conference encouraging, Ball commented:

"The American people ought not to forget, however, that we have our toughest period of the war ahead of us right now."

Some Senators said they interpreted the statement issued by the American and British war leaders as indicating that there might be greater cooperation between the navies of the two countries in combating the Axis submarine campaign and possibly a pooling of merchant shipping resources.

Subject of Conference

The President and Mr. Churchill said it was hoped that as a result of steps planned at their conference, the navies of the two countries would be able to reduce the toll of cargo vessels.

Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas and of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said it was his view that moves had been made toward closer cooperation and united action by the two fleets.

Noting that the President and Mr. Churchill had said that production of shipping was increasing greatly each month, Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisania said something more than that had to be done.

"The mere fact that we are building ships as fast as they are sunk is little consolation for the loss of lives and property on the high seas," he commented.

Wave of Bitterness Over Tobruk Gives Way to Call for Facts

By Russell Landstrom
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 28.—The British, shocked by the defeat inflicted by Marshal Edwin Rommel in Libya and hopeful that their forces would avert a worse defeat in Egypt, are composing themselves for the best and worst Prime Minister Churchill will have to say in Parliament, possibly this week.

The burning bitterness of the first news has passed. There was no lessening over the weekend of the demand for the truth about the Tobruk debacle, but in general the temper of the people and the press appeared to be one of settled determination to get at the facts objectively and apply remedies with equal dispassion.

As for the critics who have been described as Churchill baiters, the thoughtful view prevailing in London is that their guns would be spiked by a Churchill statement of confidence that Egypt would not be lost and his report on the Washington conversations, which seem to foreshadow opening of a second front at the earliest time possible.

One Issue Remains

On one vital point, however, it was thought the issue would inescapably be joined—whether the Prime Minister and the Minister of Defense would remain one. Evidently sentiment for their full separation is growing.

Lord Winster, former parliamentary secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking at Ipswich, said "the country has no wish to lose Mr. Churchill as Prime Minister, but it is idle to deny it has lost confidence in his direction of the war and would like to see him abandon and abolish the office of Minister of Defense.

"Parliament is beating the wind in debating the question of confidence in the government, because confidence, as far as the public is concerned, went after Singapore."

Bevin Scores Press

Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister, predicted in a Liverpool speech that British forces in Egypt would "get their second wind and restore their position."

"This wicked, filthy business of trying to break our national unity by playing off Winston Churchill against his colleagues on the part of certain newspaper millionaires is a most diabolical thing," he said.

In an interview, Bevin said there would be "a great call-up" soon of workers from industry into the armed forces, because "we cannot read the declaration on the Prime Minister's visit to the United States without recognizing that we must mobilize still more men."

FBI Unearths Explosives Cached by Saboteurs

FBI Arrests 'Contact Men' Of Saboteurs

the FBI had one of its agents operating a Nazi spy radio station in this country which was transmitting reports of Nazi spies here to spy headquarters in Hamburg and receiving instructions to the spies in return. Thus, the FBI broke up an espionage ring here and sent 32 of its members to prison for long terms. The absence of widespread or effective sabotage in the vast war industries of America has been pointed to as demonstrating the efficiency of antispy activities of the FBI, the State Department and the armed services.—Editor's Note.]

The new arrests brought into sharp focus the belief expressed by FBI Chief Hoover that the eight sabotage specialists rounded up obviously were intended to be the nucleus of a vast ring of saboteurs and terrorists to be built up through bribery and threat throughout the country.

Also significant was the acknowledgment further arrests may be made. The broad details of the sabotage plot revealed by Hoover left little doubt that the Berlin-directed sabotage campaign would have required a vast organization.

Speedy Roundup by FBI

Due to the speed with which the eight saboteurs were rounded up after coming ashore, however, it was doubtful that they had had time to establish very many contacts, and unofficially the FBI itself gave the impression that if more arrests are made, they will not be numerous.

The eight were put ashore in two groups, one group landing at Amagansett, Long Island, on June 13 and the other at Ponte Vedra, Fla., on June 17.

Each man carried a huge sum in cash; each was a specially-trained saboteur and terrorist; each had been trained by the Nazi high command in the "sabotage school" near Berlin; each had been selected carefully for his familiarity with the American language and customs; each had lived in the United States, and two of the men were American citizens.

What punishment will be meted out to the eight saboteurs and their "contact men" was a matter for speculation. Some authorities felt that under international law they could be shot.

All Gave Full Confessions

The FBI declined to take a public stand on this point, discouraging queries as to what will be done with the saboteurs, all of whom gave full confessions.

Experts in international law agreed, however, that the circumstances of the men's arrests—all were in civilian clothes when seized—indicated that under the war code generally recognized by all major powers, the saboteurs could be placed before firing squads.

[In Washington, Attorney General Francis Biddle said the question of prosecution of the men has not been settled, but he promised that "you may be sure that the Department of Justice will proceed with this case swiftly and thoroughly."]

Just where the eight saboteurs were in custody was not made public. It was generally presumed, however, that they were held in New York and Chicago. Six of the saboteurs were arrested in New York, and two in Chicago as recently as yesterday.

Meantime, studies of the FBI dossiers on the eight men, and examination of Hoover's original statement, unfolded an amazing picture of the campaign of sabotage plotted for them by their Nazi masters.

The objectives singled out for destruction by the eight terrorists had been selected most carefully for creating the widest destruction and spreading the most confusion.

It was planned to cripple, first, the American aircraft industry by attempting to shut off the supply of aluminum to plane factories. In this connection, Hoover revealed, the saboteurs had marked out for destruction three main plants of the Aluminum Corporation of America at Alcoa, Tenn.; Massena, N. Y., and East St. Louis, Ill.

High up on the Nazis' sabotage list were the tremendous hydro-electric plants at Niagara Falls, which under international treaty with Canada supply millions of horsepower to the giant industrial plants in Buffalo and surrounding territory in the United States, and to equally mammoth factories on the Canadian side of the border. The bulk of Canada's war industries are situated along the shores of Lake Ontario, from Niagara Falls to Hamilton and Oshawa.

Hoover told also how the saboteurs had marked down the New York City water supply system for "rubbing out." Wrecking of this system, in addition to affecting civilian morale, would have halted every war plant in highly industrialized New York City and vicinity. The few Long Island wells and emergency reservoirs in the metropolitan area are totally inadequate for meeting even the city's normal needs, much less its wartime requirements.

N. J. Beaches Closed In Hours of Darkness

Atlantic City, N. J., June 28 (AP).—The Coast Guard today barred all persons from New Jersey beaches "during the hours of darkness" and warned Boardwalk strollers they would be subject to questioning after 1:30 a. m.

Capt. E. A. Coffin, district Coast Guard officer of the Fourth Naval District, announced also that use of cameras and field glasses near the waterfront had been restricted.

The Coast Guard order prohibited fishing from bridges or causeways or boats beneath them and set forth that "fishing, either in the surf or from a pier, is not permitted after sunset."

Enemy aliens were barred from piers and wharves at all times.

night and "he was nervous, all right."

"I thought maybe it was because he hadn't registered for the draft, but he told me he had gone down that day and they had been awfully nice to him. I asked him where he'd been and he said only that he'd 'gone through a lot.' I asked him how he came back and he didn't say anything.

She Had a Hunch

"He called me Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, but I wouldn't see him. I had a hunch there was something wrong, and I said I'd see him Saturday, figuring that if there was something wrong, they'd have him by then. He had mentioned marriage Tuesday, and we agreed to be married this week. After this I'll follow my hunches."

She said she was "shocked to learn about his arrest. I never suspected him of any activity of that kind. He always appeared to be a gentleman, interested in reading and music. He played the piano and was especially fond of the music of Schubert.

"I knew he liked Hitler's policies, but that was a couple of years ago and we weren't in the war. Now I am ashamed of him and don't want anything more to do with him."

Haupt's Parents Grieve At Son's Espionage

Chicago, June 28 (INS).—A man and his wife sat embraced tonight in a modest North Side Chicago home vainly trying to comfort each other.

The tear stained faces were those of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Haupt, father and mother of Herman W. Haupt, whom FBI agents seized last night and who is being held as one of eight German spies landed earlier in the month on the East Coast of the United States.

"This is the greatest disgrace we have ever faced," murmured the distraught father. "We cannot believe that our boy would turn against the country we taught him to love."

The elder Haupt, a house painter, recalled how they had given their boy a technical high school education; how he had taught Herman the painting trade, and then had sent him out as an apprentice to a lens grinder.

"We brought him to this country when he was 5 years old," the father related. "I brought him here so he could have the advantages found only in this freedom-loving country.

"I have no use for Hitlerism, the bunds or any other person or organization which is un-American.

"I am an American!"

Although his boy left home early in 1941 and didn't return until a week ago last Saturday, Haupt said he never once thought that Herman would go back to Germany and the thought never entered his head that the boy was actually a spy.

"Why," he said, "Herman was actually plotting against mama and me."

Red Cross Extends Service to WAAC

Red Cross services will be available to men and women of the armed forces on a basis of complete impartiality, Chairman Norman H. Davis announced yesterday.

Women's Army Auxiliary Corps members will be entitled, Davis said, to all the recreational, financial, medical, and informative facilities of his organization, just as are the men.

Death Penalty Asked for 8 Captured Spies

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

Attorney General Francis Biddle declared last night that the Justice Department "will proceed swiftly and thoroughly" to prosecute the eight saboteurs landed on the East Coast by German submarines and rounded up by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"The question of prosecution has not been settled," he said. "There are a number of complicating legal factors involved."

One of these "complicating factors," it was learned, is whether the death penalty can be sought against the eight men, or at least against the two who are or were American citizens, and thus may be subject to prosecution for treason.

Demands immediately arose among members of Congress for swift justice to the saboteurs—for the death penalty if the law permits it.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said the men "ought to be shot, since they are clearly spies."

"These things have been happening in England for the last three or four months," he declared. "This probably is the first time it has happened in the United States."

Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, a member of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, insisted that "we ought to begin to get tough" in situations such as this. "We're too soft in this country!" he exclaimed.

"If it is possible," he added, "all eight should be executed. Whether the law permits this punishment I don't know.

"The trouble with us is that we are not a warlike Nation. But we are living in an age when the whole world seems to be changing its views. We'd win this war a lot sooner if we'd get more warlike. We ought to begin to hate our enemies."

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "the severest penalty should be inflicted on these men, and they should be promptly tried."

"These men," commented Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, "should be punished to the fullest extent. Some of them are citizens of the United States, and as such probably would be punishable under treason charges. Others are aliens and could be punished as spies. If death is the penalty, they should be executed. Certainly, death is none too good for them."

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois said that "these men should be tried at once and the severest penalty allowed by the law should be meted out to them."

"The Germans," he observed, "certainly would make short work of eight Americans who landed on German soil with similar intentions."

Some members of Congress felt that in addition to Navy and Coast Guard planes to tighten the coastal patrol, volunteer watchers should be stationed along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf Coasts.

Vinson said able-bodied men might be selected for this task. Connally, however, seemed to doubt whether the idea was practicable. He, as well as some other members of Congress, felt that a more thorough sea and plane patrol would be the best answer.

The President, it was pointed out, has on his desk a bill providing for construction of 800 small naval patrol boats. Likewise, fishing boats and other small craft that will be turned over to the Coast Guard, in line with the program already announced, will be used to guard against future forays by Nazi saboteurs.

The FBI is saying nothing about how the captures were made. Officials commented, however, that "some of the boys did a fine job."

Flaming Bremen Smashed Again

ond potent hammering designed as a coup de grace.

One German newspaper reaching Stockholm, the Rheinisch Westphalische Zeitung, carried a notice from Dr. Albert Speer, minister of munitions and general director of building, that many factories had been so badly damaged in German cities that local facilities were unable to make repairs.

Speer said that special commissions had been appointed to determine which industries and "in what measure it is reasonable to attempt repairs."

War industries in and around Cologne suffered "enormous damage," Speer said. At Bremen, he recounted that "large destruction" was inflicted upon shipbuilding yards, the big Focke-Wulf aircraft plant and harbor structures.

Another Nazi newspaper reaching Stockholm, the National Zeitung of Essen, reported a state of affairs verging on "criminal neglect" among civilian and air raid precaution services. It said that even such measures as storing sufficient water and sand were not taken and that pumps and other fire-fighting equipment were "in a deplorable state."

U. S. Ambulance Man Killed, Two Missing in Libyan Battle

By the United Press

Cairo, June 28. — One member of the American Field Ambulance Service was killed in the Axis onrush through Libya, one was captured, one wounded, and two are missing, it was announced today. Twelve others are back in the front lines.

Killed in action was George O. Tichenor, of Maplewood, N. J.; missing, Alexander McElwain, of Needham, Mass., and Stanley Kulak, Salem, Mass.; captured, Alan Stuyvesant, New York City; wounded, Arthur M. Stratton, Charleston, S. C.

Tichenor's body was found by Free French soldiers, who took off his identity bracelet and gave it to Lieut. H. A. James, American, serving with the Free French forces.

The capture of Stuyvesant was confirmed by a British driver who talked with him at Marshal Erwin Rommel's headquarters at Rotunda Segnali. Rommel chose the driver to carry to Bir Hacheim his demand for surrender. While there the driver told of seeing Stuyvesant, after which he returned with Gen. Pierre Koenig's rejection of the demand.

McElwain and Kulak last were seen trying to escape through a newly cut gap in the mine field north of Bir Hacheim. Stratton was in an Alexandria hospital recuperating from flesh wounds.

Lieut. LeClair Smith said the following A. F. S. members again were on the battle front with the Free French:

Lieut. Norman Jeffries of Long Island City, N. Y.; Lorenzo E. Semple 3d, 19, Yale student of Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Thomas Greenough, Providence, R. I.; Robert Brewar, Courtland, N. Y.; Oscar Carlson, New York City; Robert W. Curry, Coraopolis, Pa.; James Foster, Detroit Lakes, Minn.; Neil Gilliam, Washington, D. C.; John K. Hammond, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Paul K. Henessy, Washington, D. C.; Richard P. Monsen, Cross River, N. Y.; Charles Murray, Long Island.

Col. Ralph Richmond, A. F. S. leader who has just returned from Matruh, said about 30 additional members of the corps were attached to New Zealand units in that area.

Semple won the praise of Army officers when he drove an ambulance loaded with wounded through heavy fire. Finally forced to abandon it, he managed to get the casualties behind a nearby Bren gun carrier with the aid of two Senegalese. After three days he turned up with a British unit after he had been listed as missing.

Smith and Jeffries left Bir Hacheim before the general withdrawal in charge of a convoy of ambulances carrying out the wounded. They were furnished an armored escort.

Smith revealed that four women were at Bir Hacheim. They were his own Australian wife, who was in charge of a mobile surgical unit; Mme. Ascan, French anesthetist; Mme. Bruterne, French nurse, and Sergt. Maj. Susan Travers, English driver of Koenig's car. All escaped.

Four Taken as FBI Raids New Jersey Camp

Butler, N. J., June 28 (U.P.).—Fifteen agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, aided by a State trooper, late today raided what was described as a German-American recreation camp on Federal Hill, in Bloomingdale, near here.

About 70 persons, 16 of them described as aliens, were in the camp—known as the D. A. B. Camp—when the agents appeared. Four of the aliens were taken in custody and will be arraigned before the Alien Control Board.

No contraband was seized.

Women Face Busy Time at WAAC School

By International News Service

Des Moines, Iowa, June 28.—The new Women's Auxiliary Army Corps is going to be no army of powder puffs.

As a matter of fact, there won't be too much room for feminine frills in the program outlined tonight for the training of the first batch of 400 candidates for the WAAC officers' school.

The initial eight-week course opens July 20 at Fort Des Moines and, the way Capt. Gordon C. Jones, training director, puts it, there's going to be plenty of hard work all around.

"A girl will do everything in the Army but carry a rifle," Captain Jones asserted. "Worry about fat will be unnecessary. Fat is to be replaced by muscle."

Here's a sample of what's in store for the new woman recruit during her stay at the training center:

6 a. m.—Reveille.
6:30—Breakfast.
7:30—Close order drill.
8:05—Lecture.
8:45—More lecture.
11—Forty-five minutes if physical training.
12:15—Lunch.
1:10—Two and one-half hours of lectures.
3:55—Close-order drill.
4:15—Recall.

Thereafter come retreat, dinner, a two-hour study period and at 11 p. m., "lights out."

With that schedule in mind, Jones and other officers aren't worried unduly about what the girls will do weekends.

"They'll probably want to sleep," they explained.

thwarted an enemy counterattack. Several Japanese units were reported surrounded and cut to pieces in the surrounding mountains.

Yukan, a town in northeast Kiangsi, also was reported recaptured after a three-day battle.

With this province now the center of Japan's major effort to press her recently launched westward drive from China's seaboard, the Chinese said Yukan fell after the advancing enemy had seized Kiangkiapu and Lungtsinshih in the area of Lake Poyang.

U. S. Flier Assures Chinese Air Help Is at Hand

Chungking, June 28 (U.P.).—The voice of Lieut. Martin Cluck of Erick, Okla., went into homes throughout occupied and unoccupied China today to spread the news that American Army aviators already are here and that more are on the way to battle the Japanese.

The first United States Army airman to take part in Chungking's weekly nation-wide American hour broadcast, he described himself as a six-foot 200-pounder who was "all dynamite."

"Just show me a Jap!" Cluck said in counting himself "lucky to be in an actual theater of combat already."

He left the United States May 12, he told his listeners, and at that time American manpower and production gave the lie to Axis claims that Americans are soft and not interested in fighting.

"We're about the toughest babies you'll find," he added.

himself aboard the submersible, took her food stores and then blew her up with explosives.

Two hours later the eight men were put aboard the Dominican sloop Comercio, which took them to Curacao. Captain Hernandez said the submarine forced the Comercio to jettison half her cargo to make room for the eight.

He said the submarine had "SV-30" painted on the sides of a slightly damaged conning tower. On landing at Curacao, he said, he learned she was one of the shelling raiders.

The seven members of his crew remained in Curacao. He arrived at San Pedro Macoris yesterday.

the Japanese in the Battle of Midway. The list follows:

"Four carriers (Akagi, Kaga, Soryu, and Kiryu) sunk with all aircraft, totaling about 275, lost; and all plane crews, except a few probably rescued by their own surface ships, lost.

"Two and probably three battleships damaged, one severely.

"Two heavy cruisers (probably Mogami and Mikuma) sunk. Three or more others damaged.

"One light cruiser damaged.

"Three destroyers sunk. One additional destroyer possibly sunk.

"Four transports or cargo ships hit by bombs or torpedoes, with one or more of those probably sunk.

"The personnel losses on the ships sunk is known to have been extremely heavy and ships receiving bomb hits probably suffered heavy losses in this respect."

Newsman, Home From Reich, Finds U. S. Talks Too Freely of Military Matters

Reporter Sees Odd Contrast To Naziland

(Americans still have not learned to keep their mouths shut, volunteering what might be valuable military secrets freely to any stranger, a correspondent recently returned to the United States from internment in Germany has found.)

By Clinton B. Conger
United Press Staff Writer

New York, June 28.—Careless Americans make it easy for would-be Nazi spies to pick up military information, I have found in traveling about the country since returning from Germany on the S. S. Drottningholm June 1.

In spite of a profusion of "loose talk costs lives" signs, I found taxi drivers, porters and fellow passengers only too willing to volunteer information to a stranger which might well have been of value to German saboteurs on the loose.

Four days after I landed, I happened to take a cab from a point in the Battery up the East River Drive—all new to me, I explained to the driver, because I had been out of the country for 2½ years.

Without bothering to ask where I had been or to fish for my identity, the cab driver began pouring out information.

See the Navy Yard?

"There's the Brooklyn Navy Yard over there—twice as big as it used to be." He pointed out several ships on the ways, classifying them although I had no means to check his accuracy. He added significant blackout information the German saboteurs would have been glad to have.

A few blocks farther on, he began pointing out antiaircraft guns, some plainly visible, others partially concealed. "There's one behind that tree—and see the one over there behind the shed?" He slowed down to let me see.

A little later we passed a field where boys were playing baseball. Here he volunteered that troops drilled on the field in the morning.

All this probably was not vital information, nor was it a guarded secret, but it seemed that in such conversation important information might some time be revealed by accident. Nor was it an isolated instance.

Helpful Porter

Riding from Cincinnati to Cleveland, I was reading a book when the porter called to me: "Look at those flatcars loaded with Army stuff!"

By looking quickly between the boxcars on the siding we were passing, I could see a long row of green army machinery standing on flatcars on a more distant siding. A German saboteur probably would have missed them because of the boxcars if he didn't have a helpful porter.

Coming into Detroit from the west, a group of us were immersed in reading or chatting when one passenger called out: "Look! There's that big new bomber plant!" A private highway running near this gigantic Midwestern bomber plant has been blocked and detoured, but the helpful passenger made sure all of us got the only close-up possible from the train, which runs closer to the plant than any public road.

In Germany, yellow cards bearing in gory letters the slogan: "Careful in your conversations — the enemy is listening in!" appear in all railway cars, in subways, elevateds, streetcars, buses, and many cafes and hotel rooms. (Not in taxis, ordinarily, because there aren't many cabs left in Germany.) Those signs are pretty strictly observed, and the foreigner in Germany doesn't pause to gaze at a mounted gun, a drill ground or an arms plant even if he can get near one—unless he wants to be detained and questioned. It just isn't healthy to talk or rubberneck.

Quite probably more German agents will be landed in the United States by submarines in the future. Whether caught or not, one thing they are sure to do is underscore the means: "Loose talk costs lives."

Explosives Get In Women War Workers' Hair

New York, June 28 (U.P.).—Swedish women working in a munitions plant have all become redheads, the Stockholm radio reported today.

Chemicals used at the plant "affects the substance in the hair" and turns it red, a broadcast recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting System said.

But "unfortunately for the men who have chosen their girls for their red hair, they may wake up one day to find them blondes or brunettes again, as the color disappears as soon as the women stop working around the dangerous explosives."

King Peter Visits Annapolis, Sees Admirals in Making

ANNAPOLIS VISITOR—Visiting the United States Naval Academy yesterday, King Peter of Yugoslavia sat on the edge of a middie's bed to test its qualities. Showing him around was Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, academy superintendent

By the Associated Press

Nineteen-year-old King Peter of Yugoslavia visited the United States Naval Academy yesterday, attending chapel services and touring Academy grounds with Rear Adm. John R. Beardall, Academy superintendent.

No military honors were accorded the youthful monarch because of the unofficial nature of his visit. He came to Annapolis from Washington with his party and returned to the Nation's Capital after having lunch with Admiral and Mrs. Beardall in the superintendent's quarters.

The King and Admiral Beardall witnessed the formation of Academy sophomores, freshmen, reservists and members of the V-5 physical instructors class, for the chapel services and later heard the services.

The royal visitor, who wore a blue naval uniform, then was conducted on a tour of the Academy. Among the places visited were Bancroft Hall, the midshipmen's dormitory, and Memorial Hall.

Those in the King's party included Constantin Fotitch, Minister of Yugoslavia; Mihajlo Gavrilovic, chief of cabinet of the minister of foreign affairs; Maj. Svetislav Vohoska, the King's aide; Lieut. Col. Zivojin Radoychich, military and air attache of the Yugoslav Legation; Col. Thomas J. Betts, U. S. A., military aide; Capt. John L. Callan, U. S. N. R., naval aide, and Edward W. Nash of the State Department.

Schoolboy Slips From Boat And Drowns Near Hains Point

A 9-year-old boy was drowned yesterday in Washington Channel after slipping into the water from the deck of a boat on which he was playing with a group of schoolmates, about 3 p. m.

JOSEPH

He was identified by his companions after his body was recovered as Joseph Tillyer of 708 Sixth Street Southwest. Artificial respiration was used for nearly an hour in an attempt to save the child's life.

Owner of the boat from which the child slipped, police said, is Lloyd Parker, of 2920 P Street Southeast. Police said, however, that Parker was not aboard at the time of the drowning. Thomas Welch, 15, had charge of the boat and it was he who notified them, harbor police said.

It required approximately an hour to find the boy's body, which was in water not far from the bicycle concession at Hains Point.

It was recovered with grappling hooks by Harbor Policemen E. J. Spence and R. L. Decker and Auxiliary Policeman James Norfolk. The boy was pronounced dead by Dr. Barbara Sachs, Emergency Hospital ambulance physician, after Capt. Fred Littrel, of the District Fire Department, administered artificial respiration for 45 minutes.

Young Tillyer, son of Warren Tillyer, War Department employe, was a student at Amidon School, Sixth and F Streets Southwest.

Windsors Battle $1,000,000 Blaze

Nassau, Bahamas, June 28 (A.P.).—The Duke of Windsor joined firefighters today in combatting a million dollar blaze which destroyed nearly a block of the Nassau business section.

Fourteen buildings were razed.

The Duchess of Windsor, president of the Bahamas Red Cross, personally directed the salvage of equipment from the Red Cross building.

British troops and American civilians formed volunteer firefighting parties.

Christ Cathedral and the swank British Colonial Hotel both were endangered, but escaped damage. The Charlotte Hotel burned.

Raid Damaged Cathedral at Canterbury

By the Associated Press

London June 28.—The German air raid of June 1, on Canterbury, cradle of Anglican christianity, damaged the famous cathedral, destroyed several historic buildings and laid waste much of the residential section, it was disclosed today.

The damage to the cathedral was estimated at many thousands of dollars although the edifice escaped a direct hit by high explosives which, however, wrecked the modern library and deanery and battered Kings School, England's oldest public school.

Somerset Maugham, the novelist, is perhaps the best known living graduate of the school, which served as the background for some of the early scenes in his novel "Of Human Bondage."

Hundreds of the cathedral windows were blown out. The whole area was littered with rubble and shops and homes in the vicinity were set afire. The ancient stained glass had been removed from the cathedral at the outbreak of the war.

Incendiaries fell on the cathedral roof but were smothered before serious fire could start. St. Augustine's chair, on which archbishops for centuries sat during the enthronement ceremony, was undamaged, but St. George's Church was destroyed.

In the town itself the Royal Fountain Hotel, 300 years old, where Queen Elizabeth stayed, was burned out, as well as several places with Dickensian associations.

Prominent residents of the town said morale never faltered. One of them said: "I still wonder at the perfect calm and courage of the people of Canterbury. Hundreds of people are homeless, but the only anxiety expressed was: 'How much can I do for somebody else?'"

Last Rites Set Tomorrow for J. A. Scherrer

Funeral services for John Albert Scherrer, 71, nationally known chemist and expert in nonferrous metals, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Pumphrey funeral parlors in Chevy Chase.

Mr. Scherrer died at his home, 305 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., of cerebral hemorrhage, with which he had been stricken June 22.

He had been associated with the Bureau of Standards from 1911 until his retirement in 1940. At that time he was a senior chemist. Recently he had been recalled from retirement to assist in national defense research.

He was a member of the Washington Academy of Sciences, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the American Chemical Society.

Born at New Cambria, Mo., he had lived in the Washington area for 31 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Blanche M. Scherrer, of the same address.

The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister will officiate at the services for Mr. Scherrer. Burial will be in the Gaithersburg (Md.) Cemetery.

Allies Bomb Japs On New Guinea

Allied Headquarters, Australia (Monday), June 29 (A.P.).—Allied bombers have made a prolonged raid on Japanese troop dispositions at Lae and Salamau, on New Guinea, northeast of Australia, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Allied raiders also bombed Tulagi, in the Solomon Islands group, about 800 miles northeast of Australia.

Dr. Andrew Stewart, Renowned Authority on Helium, Dies

Dr. Andrew Stewart, 74, retired Bureau of Mines scientist, died yesterday at his home, 1442 Clifton Street Northwest, after a year's illness.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 10 a. m. tomorrow, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. Honorary pallbearers will include George Steiger, Dr. Edwin B. Behrend, Herman Gasch, R. A. Cattell, Prof. Arthur Johnson, Harry Fowler, Dr. Clifford Seibel and Frank G. Stewart.

A native and lifelong resident of Washington, Dr. Stewart was the first commanding officer of Washington cadets while a student at Central High School.

After obtaining master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees at the University of Leipsig, Germany, he established the first clinical laboratory in Washington in association with the late Dr. George W. Johnston.

Later he entered the Government service and at the time of his retirement in 1933 was assistant to R. A. Cattell, chief engineer of the helium division of the Bureau of Mines.

In the meantime, Dr. Stewart authored a number of publications, including one that is considered among the best authoritative references on helium, and served for some 10 years on the Interdepartmental Patent Board.

Dr. Stewart was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, Society of the War of 1812, Society of the Colonial Wars, and the American Chemical Society.

He was also a past master of Harmony Lodge No. 17 of Masons, a thirty-second degree Mason, member of the Mystic Shrine and member of the Cosmos Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Florence Behrend Stewart, and three children, William Behrend Stewart, Marion Stewart, and Ensign Henry Howell Stewart, United States Navy Reserve.

Inventor of Ross Automatic Rifle Dies

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 28 (A.P.).—Sir Charles Ross, 70, inventor of the Ross automatic rifle used by the British Army and one of the largest land owners in the British Empire, died here today following a short illness.

He resided at Passa Grille, near here. Survivors include his wife, Lady Dorothy Ross, who was with him when he died.

Sidelights of the War

Harbor Dug on Persian Gulf To Speed Supplies to Russia

Cairo, June 28 (U.P.).—Fifty American engineers and technicians, directing 1000 native laborers and mule drivers, have dug a new harbor into the Persian Gulf coast to land the mounting volume of war supplies for Russia, reliable sources revealed today.

Construction of the port became imperative because of timelosing congestion at Basra, Iraq, the best disembarkation point in the area.

To conserve shipping space, a large modern assembly plant is going up ashore which will permit shipment of completely dismounted bombers. Progress is being made at another point on an extensive plant with a modern assembly line to turn out trucks for Russia.

Bomb Kills Magnate

London, June 28 (A.P.).—Lord Glanely, sportsman and steamship owner whose career was often epitomized in the phrase "from cabin boy to millionaire," was killed last night in a German air raid on a southwest town where he had leased a house a few weeks ago.

Glanely, born William James Tatem 74 years ago, went to sea as a boy. After being shipwrecked, he went to work in a shipping office and later founded the Tatem Steamship Co. with one small vessel. In a few years he controlled a fleet of merchant ships and had become one of the wealthiest men in Wales.

He was created a baronet in 1916 and a baron two years later.

Glanely won many major turf events from 1919 on and was always a lavish supporter of racing. He founded one of the world's most valuable stud farms at Exning near Newmarket.

Nazi Trains Derailed

Moscow (Monday), June 29 (A.P.).—Saboteurs at work in eastern Germany have derailed two fully loaded trains, killing many persons, the Moscow raido said today, quoting Stockholm reports.

Turkey Talk

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 28 (A.P.).—The continuing departure of Russians from Ankara, Turkey, in the wake of Soviet Ambassador Sergei Alexandrovich Vinogradov was reported today in German dispatches broadcast by the Berlin radio.

Vinogradov was said to have left Moscow last Thursday, in response to a summons home for consultation.

The German dispatches said next to go was the deputy military attache at the Soviet Embassy in Ankara. Then, these reports added, the wives of members of the embassy staff as well as of the consulate staff left Ankara.

Russian-Turkish relations became slightly strained this spring when the Turks arrested two Russians on charges of complicity in a bomb attempt on the life of Franz Von Papen, German Ambassador to Ankara, last winter.

Australia Healthful

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere In Australia, June 28.—The health of American troops in Australia is proving exceptionally good. One of the largest American detachments here has had an average of only 2 per cent illness at any one time—considerably lower than the War Department's estimates for Army posts in the United States.

The record is even more remakable because the detachment is encamped in the southern part of Australia, where a winter climate prevails.

Main Armies Locked in Battle for Egypt

summed up the opening phases of the fighting, some 11 miles inside Egypt and 165 miles from the vital naval base at Alexandria:

"Our forces closed with the enemy yesterday and heavy fighting followed all day," it said. "Enemy armored forces which have bypassed our position west of Matruh were met by our battle troops. Some of our armored forces attacked enemy armored forces west of Matruh. the battle continues."

(The Italian communique said the Axis army had reached a position on the coast road about 19 miles beyond Matruh and that several hundred prisoners were captured and "several dozen" tanks and a number of batteries were destroyed. The Italians also acknowledged that two of their generals had fallen on Egyptian soil.

The Germans said only that their troops "successfully continued fighting in the Matruh area."

Huge United States Air Corps B-24 Liberator bombers were being flown here for the desert battle and they were almost immediately ready for operations after taking on gasoline and bomb loads. So far the great four-motored planes have struck mainly at Bengasi and Tobruk, and their raids have reduced Axis supplies moving toward the battle zone. None has been lost in the desert so far.

The defending troops thrown into battle include British, Dominion and India units. New equipment has been moved up to meet the onslaught.

The attacking force consists of two German mechanized divisions and an Italian armored division, all supported by mobile infantry—in short, everything Rommel could move into Egypt.

So far the battle has been orthodox desert fighting supported by heavy air activity on both sides. Parachute troops have not been used.

The Allied bombers, including Americans, have droped countless death-dealing missiles while the British, South African and Australian fighters have swept the skies and strafed enemy ground forces.

There has been considerable air fighting over the Matruh area with low level attacks on enemy tanks and transport columns. One column was attacked on the coast road between Sidi Barrani and Matruh and 82 tanks were destroyed.

United States Air Corps bombers ano the R. A. F. "struck heavily at the enemy in and behind the battle area" last night, an R. A. F. communique said.

The R. A. F. raised from 12 to 19 the number of Axis planes destroyed over the battle area Friday, and listed two more shot down yesterday. Seven others were destroyed over and near Malta Friday. The British lost five aircraft.

Enemy landing fields—particularly the base at Derna—were strafed at low level and an Axis supply ship was bombed and left burning off Tobruk. The R. A. F. said Axis planes raided British positions behind the lines, between Bir el Arab and Daba, 75 miles east of Matruh.

As Egypt's peril grew increasingly apparent, Premier Mustafa Nahas Pasha took steps to combat Axis activity behind the lines.

He ordered citizens to report immediately any landing of planes other than at official airports; the presence of anyone who entered Egypt illegally; or anyone spreading rumors. Egypt is not at war with the Axis but is linked to Britain in a military alliance.

Military experts refused to speculate on the outcome of the battle but declared that undoubtedly extensive and decisive action was in progress.

The "batlle groups" which met the German panzer forces west of Matruh were described by a military commentator as forces of guns and other arms which can be maneuvered swiftly to meet armored or infantry attack. Thus it appeared that Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie was using mobile artillery as a screening force to blunt the spearhead of the German assault.

All commentators emphasized the fierceness of the struggle. Only yesterday it was announced that the Eighth Army, which lost heavily in men and material in the fall of Tobruk and the retreat from Libya, had been reinforced to full strength.

Rommel was using his familiar tactics in always attacking with the sun behind him, blinding the defenders. His flanking operation by-passing the British position west of Matruh suggested the battle might be aimed at duplicating the tactics of the battle for Libya, when the Germans threw their main forces wide around the southern anchor of the main British defense line at Bir Hacheim.

The current Axis offensive was by far the most dangerous of the war in North Africa and was being fought in desert heat that reached 135 degrees fahrenheit on sands which have felt the tread of countless conquerors through the centuries.

The Allied stake was huge. If Rommel is able to destroy the Allied Army, the whole Middle East may fall within the Axis grasp. Germany then could obtain the sorely needed oil riches of Iraq and Iran.

The conquest of Egypt—critical crossroads of the East and West—would cement Axis control of the Mediterranean and prepare the way for a possible junction with the Japanese in the Orient. It also might result in outflanking of Russian armies of the rich Caucasus and close the vital supply line to Russia through the Persian Gulf. Moreover, the loss of Egypt might shake the whole wavering Middle East and its restive Arab peoples into the Axis camp.

One aspect of the battle favorable to the British was their shortened interior supply lines, linked to their bases by excellent railways. The Axis army was 240 miles from its nearest base of Tobruk—won just a week ago today—and 500 miles from Bengasi. Its original supply port, Tripoli, was 1100 miles away.

It was against these lengthened and tenuous communications that the R. A. F. and United States air forces hammered ceaselessly. For if the air forces can stop Rommel's water and oil, his offensive must collapse.

Chinese Children Give $1200

PUPILS MAKE SACRIFICE—The students of Gin Kuo Chinese School on L Street raised $1200 for China War Relief by taking candy and ice cream out of their life and cutting down on movies. May Har Yee presents the check to Frank Lee (right), chairman of the refugee fund of the Chinese Salvation Association of Washington. The Rev. C. C. Hung looks on

Students of the Gin Kuo Chinese Language School yesterday presented $1,200 for Chinese war relief, at their annual graduation exercises.

The program was held at the Chinese Community Church, 1011 L Street Northwest, where awards were presented for exemplary citizenship and outstanding school work.

Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, presided at the ceremonies, and Capt. M. H. Lee was the main speaker. Dr. Hung accepted the gift for war relief, and will send it to Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

Germans Open Third Front in Russia

of Sevastopol is raging on historic Malakhov Kurgan Hill, the fall of which decided the fate of the city in 1855, front dispatches said.

[Malakhov Kurgan Hill, southeast of Sevastopol, the highest eminence in the rugged heights around the city, was described as a blazing inferno of combat far more violent than its storming in the Crimean War which broke the spine of Russian resistance after an 11-month siege.

[Soviet ships steaming through a rain of bombs and shells were reported maintaining constant ferry service in and out of Sevastopol. They carried out wounded troops, women and children, and brought in provisions and ammunition.]

(The German high command announced that German and Rumanian troops had captured several strongly fortified heights at Sevastopol and forced the Russians to withdraw from "an important defensive sector." The location of the sector was not given, however.)

The Soviet armored train, mentioned in the Kharkov front dispatches, was said to be like those used extensively in the Russian civil war. It penetrated deep behind the German rear in the Ukraine and blasted enemy troop concentrations with big guns.

In a strange duel between the train and planes, German fliers succeeded in destroying the locomotive tender and part of the railway track. Enemy tanks then tried to rush the train, the dispatches said, but the crew beat off the assaults, repaired the damage and brought the train to its base.

Thirty Nazi tanks attacked in one sector, according to the dispatches, but 14 of these were burned or damaged. The remaining tanks crossed the trenches and headed deep into the defenses, but the Russians mowed down the supporting infantry and the tanks withdrew.

In another sector, the dispatches said, Red army artillery destroyed 13 German tanks and 4 armored cars, while the Russian tanks counterattacked on the flank, killing 850 enemy troops.

The Nazi air force, meanwhile, continued its mass raids on the Sevastopol front. The building housing the famous panorama, depicting the nineteenth century siege of the base, was destroyed, but the paintings, it was understood, had been removed.

Tass, official Russian news agency, said guerillas in the Leningrad area had killed over 7000 German officers and men in a recent unspecified period, during which 400 populated places in three districts covering 1000 square miles were recaptured.

Mannerheim Visits Hitler

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 28 (AP).—Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, commander of the Finnish armed forces, has paid a return visit to Adolf Hitler at the German headquarters on the Russian front, it was announced officially today.

Later, Mannerheim was guest of Reichmarshal Hermann Goering at his headquarters, a communique said. (It was the first mention in months of Goering—head of the German air forces—at the Russian front.)

First Army Glider Pilot Gets Wings

the field to stop within 2 feet of a posted red marker.

A native of Providence, R. I., and a precision instrument inspector before his induction into the Army on November 25, 1940, Sampson is the like of thousands, possibly, which the Army will train. The brightly painted craft he used yesterday was one of the training gliders now used at Wright Field for test purposes, here with seven fighting planes as an exhibit to stimulate Air Force enlistment and the sale of war bonds.

The eight, a captured German Messerschmitt among them, were scheduled to leave today for other cities along the Nation-wide tour route.

Besides the Messerschmitt, the Air Cavalcade included a B-17 light American bomber, which set the show's pace with thrilling low sweeps across the field; two other American planes, a Curtis P-40 and the dreaded P-30 Airacobra, and two British ships, one of them the R. A. F.'s vaunted Spitfire.

The air show opened when Bolling Field fliers in four P-40's and three Lockheed Lighting P-38's gunned their ships across the Potomac River between their base and the airport.

The Army wants glider pilots and is concentrating now on getting them, the War Department said yesterday. Applicants for the training must be between 18 and 36 years of age and individually must "have more cold nerve than any other pilot," because he always lands with a "dead stick," the constant dread of the power pilot.

The glider program is one of the most important now in progress in the Arm Air Forces and consequently there is a tremendous demand for glider pilots, it was announced.

Sampson began his training, which ended flush against his pair of wings yesterday, on May 1.

The War Bonds sales were stimulated very well, too. Marlene Dietrich, movie star, walked unattended and lonesome-eyed in front of the crowd, which spotted her but politely didn't yell, as has happened before. It did stop looking, however, at the eight exhibited planes.

She took a microphone and appealed to the crowd to buy more War Bonds and James J. Morgan of New York City, president of the National Dental Hygiene Association, kicked in a check for $50,000 on behalf of his organization. After the war, when the $50,000 bond has done its work, the money will be used to further dental hygiene again.

Thousands Walk For Lack of Gas

Petroleum Coordinator, indicated gasoline rationing would be extended shortly to States neighboring the present Eastern ration area.

"Stocks in zones adjacent to the rationed areas are dropping," he told the dealers. "They may soon join you."

In Washington Henderson's "more walking" prediction, augmented by sunny skies, saw a marked increase in pedestrian traffic.

The transit company also had a busy schedule bringing hundreds to downtown theaters and other places of amusement.

Heeding the advice of auto clubs to leave their cars at home, many did so, and will be fortunate if they can refuel their tanks before the first of the month.

Following an effort to determine the attitude of motorists in the rationing area of the Atlantic seaboard, a survey by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, it was reported yesterday, shows that approximately 65 per cent are convinced rationing is necessary, while 20 per cent regard it as unnecessary. Others are doubtful or have no opinion.

The company feels that as its investigation was widely spread geographically, and included various age, income and occupational groups, it represents a cross-section of opinions and attitudes held by motorists in the rationing area.

Some 36 per cent of the motorists said they had given up pleasure driving entirely and 29 per cent said they had reduced such driving. Twenty per cent reported no change in use of their cars.

Of these, 10 per cent said they had enough gas to take care of their needs, 7 per cent never used the car much anyway, and others cut down their motoring because of tires. Only 1.7 per cent had put their cars up entirely.

The reason for gasoline shortage was understood by 59 per cent to be shortage of petroleum transportation, while 21 per cent gave "Government" as a reason. Only 2 per cent felt that rationing was a psychological effort to make the people "war conscious."

U. S. Treasury Studies New 'Spending Tax'

By the Associated Press

The Treasury, seeking a way to impose higher income taxes than those in the pending bill without penalizing too heavily persons who have fixed debt charges to meet, is studying a special income levy from which at least part of "saved" income would be exempt.

The plan, called a "spending tax," would be imposed on top of the income tax contemplated in the bill approved last week by the House Ways and Means Committee. Its effect would be to increase the tax on income ordinarily spent for various commodities but not on income used, for example, to meet mortgage payments.

This idea, it was learned yesterday, was broached by Randolph Paul, tax adviser to Secretary Morgenthau, in a memorandum prepared for the Ways and Means Committee. Paul made no specific recommendations and did not define "saved" income but indicated that the exemptions would cover such things as payments on a home, purchase of War Bonds and possibly life insurance premiums.

As he outlined it, the central thought was that income taxes could not be placed as high as the Treasury thinks they ought to go without an intolerable hardship on persons who must meet fixed obligations such as payments on a house. Yet to exempt such payments from the regular income tax would be inequitable.

Consequently, the spending tax is under study as a sort of super income tax applying, after basic deductions, to income which actually is spent.

Paul's memorandum said:

"Even under this separate tax, a complete exemption of all savings might be unnecessary; one-half or three-quarters, or some other fraction, of the saved income could be exempt.

Full Military Rites For Capt. R. A. Andrew

Funeral services for Ransel Eugene Andrew, 49, who died Friday at Oteen, N. C., following a long illness, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. in Arlington National Cemetery. A captain in the Army during the last World War, he will be accorded full military honors.

Congress Faces Overtime Sessions

ate and the House have failed to agree in several past meetings.

The main bone of contention in the farm bill is a Senate provision to permit sales of Government-owned surplus grain at prices below parity (the price at which a farm commodity has the same purchasing power as in a previous period, usually 1909-14.) The Senate last week instructed its conferees to insist on this provision, while the House ordered its representatives to hold out for elimination of the Senate proposal. The conferees will meet again tomorrow.

Relatively minor differences between the Senate and the House are holding up final action on the bill carrying 425 million dollars for the State, Commerce and Justice Departments.

A disagreement over the amount to be appropriated for the Central Valley irrigation and power project in California is the main obstacle in the way of passage of a 190 million-dollar Interior Department supply bill.

Holding up a $1,000,000,000 appropriation for the Labor Department and the Federal Security Agency is House insistence on abolition of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the face of a Senate vote to continue the agency.

Retarding passage of a 280 million-dollar WPA appropriation bill is conflict over how the curtailed funds for this agency shall be spent and whether regional or State offices should be cut down.

Missouri Flood Costs Three Lives

St. Charles, Mo., June 28 (AP).—Three deaths and millions of dollars worth of destruction to crops and livestock already had been marked up tonight to the marauding Missouri River as its record-breaking crest moved eastward across Missouri.

Water was lapping over the top of the levee's lower end here and threatening various points.

In central Missouri thousands of acres of farmland were inundated. The town of Gasconade has been without electric power since late Friday.

Gas System, Price Rise Hit By LaGuardia

By the Associated Press

New York, June 28 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia declared today in his weekly broadcast to New Yorkers that the present system of oil distribution and the 2½-cent gasoline price increase was discriminatory against the East.

He urged that the price rise yield be used to help finance water route shipments instead of to reduce the deficit of an oil pool "already hopelessly in the red."

Mayor LaGuardia emphasized that he was not asking for gasoline for "joy riding" in describing the gravity of the oil shortage in the East.

"What we do ask is equal treatment with the rest of the country," he said. At a conference on the fuel situation in Washington Friday he said he had pointed out that he was appealing for the people of New England and the entire Eastern Coast.

"New York could not be happy if we were unrationed and the people of New England were suffering," he said. "We are that kind of Americans here in New York. We want to take all the burden of war along with the rest of America."

The mayor suggested that the distance traveled by railway tank cars might be reduced "by drawing oil from the Midwest, utilizing lake barges, tankers and the New York canals and bringing oil down by waterway instead of bringing the oil all the way from Texas in tank cars."

The real solution to the problem, he said, lies in a House bill (HR 7218) which would "authorize the administrator" to move oil where it is needed.

"Nothing less will meet the crisis," he said. "Anything less would be unfair to the East—the only section under rationing which must also pay the increased price. Gasoline is cheaper and unlimited elsewhere. Other sections are using transportation facilities which could be used to bring oil here."

Just by KEEPING WELL
You can help win this war!

News from home that all are well and working hard is what our soldiers want most to hear!
What can one person—at home—do to help win the war?
Just do your level best to stay well, to keep from being sick and losing time or spreading your illness.

By the end of this year 35,000 nurses and 40,000 physicians and dentists will be away at war. That is nearly one-third of America's total medical force! And so, for our own sakes we should save our remaining doctors' time for serious and unavoidable sickness and accident.
It's EASY to keep well
Keeping well today isn't as hard as it used to be. Just follow a few simple rules and you have a fine chance to escape most kinds of sickness!
And it is terribly important—to you, to your family and to the whole nation right now. Read how important DR. THOMAS PARRAN, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, says it is for you to keep well:
"Each individual can contribute to his own health protection and improvement by adopting a few simple ways of healthful living. Each of us must accept this responsibility and stick to it with firm purpose. The total of individual responsibility for personal health, accepted by millions of American men and women, will make an incalculable contribution to victory."
Read the rules in the next column. Follow them. If you do, you will be helping to win the war.
FOLLOW THESE 5 RULES

Memorize these five keys to good health. Follow them carefully—for your own welfare and for victory.
1. Eat right
Milk, butter, eggs, fish, meat, cheese, beans and peas, fruit, green leafy vegetables and the yellow ones, whole-grain or enriched cereals and bread—these are the key foods. Eat plenty of them. And eat 3 meals a day!
2. Get your rest
Regularity counts most. You can't catch up on lost sleep or missed relaxation! Try to keep on a regular schedule every day. Take it easy for a little while after lunch and dinner. Go to bed on time, get up on time.
3. See your doctor once a year
You have your car checked and serviced every thousand miles. Do as much for your body. Physicians can prevent many diseases and illnesses for both children and grownups nowadays. Give your doctor a chance now, BEFORE you get sick. Go to see him!
4. Keep clean
Plenty of baths, lots of soap. Clean hands, clothes, houses, beds! Get fresh air, sunshine. Drink lots of water.
5. "Play" some each day
Romp with the family, visit with friends, take walks, play games—or do whatever you like to give your mind and body a change from the daily grind on the job. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."
Life insurance has provided the means to keep millions of Americans in health and security. This message is one way life insurance companies believe they can help you to help win this war. Institute of Life Insurance, 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Plans Ready to Register 18-20 Group

Draft to Hold Fifth Listing Tomorrow

Registrars in 51 public schools throughout the District were reported ready yesterday to complete the registration of Washington's man power Tuesday by listing youngsters in the 18 to 20 year group.

The fifth Selective Service registration will take place between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. tomorrow and when the sign-up has been completed the District along with the rest of the Nation will have a record of every man here between the ages of 18 and 65.

Youths 20 May Serve

The 20-year-olds are subject to Army service, under an amendment to the original Selective Service Act, but the 18 and 19 year group is not presently liable to service. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service chief, has said, however, that it may be necessary to call men in this age bracket.

Here in Washington, eligibles, who are defined by Presidential proclamation as men born on or after January 1, 1922, and on or before June 30, 1924, will be required to register at the closest registration point in the area where they reside. Transients have been directed to sign up at the point most convenient to them inasmuch as no special registration center has been prepared for them as previously.

To Give Same Information

They will be required to supply the same information and answer the same questions asked of their elders in previous registrations, such as: name, place of residence and mailing address; telephone number, age in years and date of birth, place of birth, name and address of a person who always will know the registrant's whereabouts, employer's name and address and place of employment and business.

The District Commissioners, by proclamation, have urged all employers to grant their workers sufficient time off tomorrow to enable them to go to registration centers, a list of which was published in Sunday's issue of The Post.

Full Military Services for Capt. Meadows

Funeral services for Capt. Pal Lamar Meadows, U. S. N., of 3245 Worthington Street Northwest, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today at the Fort Myer chapel. Burial with full military honors will follow in Arlington National Cemetery.

Captain Meadows, who was on the staff of the Chief of Naval Operations, was stricken with a heart ailment and died Friday at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md. He was 47.

During World War I he served on the U. S. S. Georgia, and had since served as commanding officer of the U. S. S. Breese, U. S. S. Platte and the U. S. S. Vixen, his last command at sea. He also had been officer in charge of the naval station at New Orleans, La.

Born in Lisbon, La., he maintained his official home in Ruston, La. He was a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, class of 1918.

Capt. Meadows is survived by his wife, the former Etta M. Harrell, of Ruston, La., and his two daughters, Marjorie Jean, and Dorothy Ann Meadows.

The services will be conducted by Capt. R. D. Workman, chaplain, U. S. Navy. Commanding the naval escort will be Commander Harold Biesemeier, U. S. N., while the honorary pallbearers are to be Capts. L. N. Moeller, Civil Engineer Corps; J. R. Palmer, E. W. Mills and A. M. Bledsoe, and Commanders P. F. Lee and W. M. Callaghan, all of the U. S. Navy.

Litvinoffs Attend Russian Exhibit

The Russian Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff yesterday afternoon were guests of the Russian Relief art exhibition currently being held at the United States Chamber of Commerce. The canvases and sculptures by Russian-born American artists, several native Russians and a handful of Americans were selected by Edward Bowan of the Fine Arts section of the Treasury Department and a committee of Washington laymen and artists.

The Volga Balalaika Orchestra entertained yesterday's guests of the art show with a series of Russian folk songs. Among the canvases are works by William Gropper, distinguished American painter and caricaturist, who frequently uses Russian backgrounds in his pictures. Mme. Litvinoff has contributed four of her pencil drawings, which are on prominent display. The exhibition will continue through Friday.

Police Killer Cornered, Ends Life

Kansas City, June 28 (AP).—Cornered in a baby's nursery, a man sought as the killer of a Kansas City policeman shot himself to death today.

The man, identified as 25-year-old Alfred G. Keast, former California convict, object of a house to house chase by 30 policemen, went into a clothes closet and fired one shot into his body and two into his head.

An unidentified woman tipped police about 5 o'clock this morning that a man wanted by the police was in the southside residential section. Neighbors kept phones busy reporting location of the suspect.

Keast burst into the kitchen of a home where a maid, aroused by the sirens and commotion, had just taken an infant from its bed. Keast ran into the nursery and into the closet, the police a step behind, and killed himself. He was carrying two pistols.

In his pocket was a confession written on a bar menu, admitting the officer slaying. It was dated June 13, the day officers C. E. Langley and Arthur J. Morris picked up Keast and a woman companion for investigation of a worthless check complaint. There was a burst of pistol shots and Morris fell dead. The couple fled in the police car.

Glenn Dale Slipping?

Reports of "inexcusable carelessness" in the preparation of food at the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatorium are the more disturbing because Glenn Dale has been one of the few first-class institutions operated by the District. The findings of Commissioner Mason and R. F. Camalier, municipal counsel for the Senate District Committee, suggest that even this comparatively new institution is beginning to be afflicted by the conditions which have made Blue Plains a disgrace to the Nation's Capital. Fortunately, an administrative assistant for the sanatorium is provided for in the 1943 appropriation bill. We are confident that the Health Department will do its utmost to eliminate any negligence or mismanagement and to maintain the institution on a high plane of public service.

Nevertheless, the current incident indicates once more that eternal vigilance is the price of good public service as well as of liberty. And that is precisely where the local system is weakest. No body of District citizens is charged with final responsibility for maintenance of high standards in our institutions. The officials to whom this job is entrusted answer only to Congress or the President and neither has time to give to these local problems. Commissioner Mason is to be commended for responding promptly to the complaints at Glenn Dale. If he succeeds in keeping Glenn Dale from slipping into the state of deterioration that has frequently characterized Gallinger Hospital and Blue Plains, it will be in spite of a clumsy system and not because of it.

Gasoline Goes Up

Price Administrator Henderson would have preferred to pay subsidies to the oil companies to cover the extra cost of bringing supplies into the Eastern area by rail instead of by water. Indeed, Mr. Henderson thinks that these additional outlays, made necessary by submarine activity, should be regarded as a public charge quite as much as the cost of patrol boats. But Congress has failed to provide funds for the payment of industrial subsidies. So the OPA is forced to turn to the only alternative—an increase in the price of gasoline and fuel oil to Eastern consumers.

One could argue endlessly over the question whether it is better to grant subsidies or raise prices. To us it seems that the answer depends entirely upon the circumstances of each particular case. In the present instance relief is made necessary by presumably temporary additions to producers' costs which can be segregated and estimated with a fair degree of accuracy. Under such conditions the subsidy method appears preferable to a lifting of price ceilings. It would have been a comparatively simple matter to offset the losses to the oil companies during recent months by a direct payment from the Treasury. It would have been even simpler in the beginning to have subsidized the railways transporting oil, so as to keep costs from rising.

On the other hand, the compensatory effect of raising prices to consumers is only a matter of guesswork and the higher prices give rise to a host of related problems. For example, filling station operators are already protesting that only their suppliers benefit from the price increases, although they themselves have suffered a heavy reduction in business. They are not pacified by being reminded that the price increases are merely an offset to company losses resulting from higher rail charges for oil and its products. Householders and motorists in the Eastern States will also be inclined to resent the fact that prices are not being advanced in other parts of the country.

The most vexing problem, perhaps, from the viewpoint of the OPA, is the effect of increased prices for gas and fuel oil upon industrial production costs. An increase in fuel-oil prices, in particular, is sure to bring a chorus of demands from industries consuming this higher-priced fuel for upward price adjustments for their own products. In an endeavor to forestall such demands the OPA has omitted heavy fuel oils from the price-raising order. So the entire burden of the increases will be laid upon buyers of gasoline and light fuel oils. In effect they will be called upon to subsidize the industries using heavy fuel oil.

Here, then, is a most instructive example of the kind of difficulties that arise under a system of Government price control. Other countries have discovered that prices cannot be kept down without resort to subsidies upon occasion. But if subsidies were to be employed liberally and indiscriminately, the result would be disastrous. Consequently, whenever a substantial number of essential producers of average efficiency are unable to exist under the price ceilings covering their industry, those ceilings should be raised. For if the Treasury had to pour out subsidies to bolster up the system of fixed prices, we should end with a huge debt created to support an industrial structure no longer capable of standing on its own feet.

Legislative Jam

The fiscal year ends tomorrow at midnight. So Congress has just two working days in which to dispose of appropriation bills totaling $47,500,000,000. It is a foregone conclusion that many of these bills will have to be held over, leaving departments and agencies with only limited funds to tide them over a waiting period.

This legislative log jam indicates poor planning on the part of Congress rather than lack of industry. There is every reason to believe that members of Congress are working hard to keep abreast of the demands made upon them. But they seem unable to realize that legislative methods must be altered to suit the requirements of the wartime emergency. Anyone who listens to the discussions in committee or the debates on the House and Senate floors cannot fail to be impressed by the amount of time spent on essentially minor issues. They are often issues that once seemed highly important but have ceased to be so since the outbreak of war. Debates continue to be leisurely and especially time-consuming when familiar problems concerning agriculture and domestic affairs are being discussed. That is understandable; but the result is to pile up a formidable backlog of pressing unfinished business.

Congress should realize that a radical change in methods of procedure is called for. When there is so much to do that only a part can be done thoroughly, legislators must concentrate on bills of major importance in winning the war and by tacit agreement effect a speedy compromise of minor differences of opinion.

FBI's Master Stroke

The rounding up of eight Nazi saboteurs who were landed from two U-boats on Long Island and Florida beaches less than three weeks ago is a bright feather in the cap of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and its director, J. Edgar Hoover. For obvious reasons few details have been given out as to just how the plot was discovered and the means that were employed to track down and apprehend the saboteurs. That it was a brilliant job of detection, however, is beyond doubt. All eight of these Nazi agents knew their way about in this country; all spoke English well; all had been given a thorough training in sabotage. They were put ashore with a large sum of money in their possession and a large store of explosives. But they were caught before they could put any of their destructive plans into operation.

The FBI's master stroke has thus had a doubly useful purpose. It has prevented serious damage from being done to vital military installations and war plants in this country. And, what may prove to be of even greater importance, it has helped to reveal the technique by which the Nazis had planned to throw numerous monkey wrenches into the machinery of our war effort. We thus have reason to congratulate ourselves on this fortunate outcome of a plot which, had the FBI not been on the job, might have had disastrous consequences.

It cannot be assumed, however, that the danger from Nazi sabotage has been eliminated by the apprehension of these eight agents. The very circumstance that the German government employed the desperate device of sending U-boats to points only a short distance off our coast, thus exposing those craft and their crews to destruction if detected, shows how determined are Hitler and his evil crew to interfere with our war effort. We must be eternally on guard against further efforts of this kind. Fortunately, the FBI has shown that in this instance it was very much on the job, and we can anticipate that, armed by what it learned from the prisoners and the material found on them, it will be even better prepared to fight such Nazi efforts in the future.

Educated Army

The Bureau of the Census reports that a preponderant majority of the white men inducted into the Army during the past two years have had at least some high school training. Forty-one per cent are high school graduates or men with college training. Less than one-third failed to progress beyond the elementary schools.

The contrast between this showing and that of World War I is startling. Then the grade schools supplied 79 per cent of all the white selectees, while only 9 per cent were high school graduates or men with college training. Less detailed data for Negro selectees likewise show a gratifying rise in the educational level. Sixty-three per cent of the Negroes from the North and 33 per cent of the Southern Negroes inducted have attended high school, compared with only 14 and 3 per cent respectively in the last war.

The mere fact that the present Army has had more schooling than the Army of 25 years ago does not necessarily point to an equally great improvement in the general educational level of the people. The demands of modern warfare undoubtedly call for a more highly trained mentality and that, of course, results in greater emphasis upon education as a test of fitness.

However, census officials conclude that the higher educational rating of the selectees of World War II is "due largely to a spectacular increase in educational opportunities in the United States" in the interim period. In support of that conclusion census tabulations show that about 32 per cent of all men in the 18-to-44 age group had completed at least a high school education. The high school enrollment in 1940 was seven times greater than in 1916, while almost as many men were attending college as were in high school 25 years ago. If statistics are to be trusted, we are justified in abandoning any fear that our reserves of man power are seriously diluted by a large residuum of uneducated or inadequately educated men, incapable of becoming good soldiers.

Help For Congress

At last, it appears, Congress is going to break the deadlock which has prevented the construction of wartime housing and essential community improvements in the Capital. If the Senate and House accept the compromise reached by the conference committee, a year-long fight over the Lanham Act for Washington will be at an end. It is gratifying that this prolonged struggle did not end in a complete fiasco, as many feared that it would a fortnight ago. But that gratification should not prevent us from looking beneath the surface of this controversy for the real cause of what came very near to being a breakdown in government.

Congress has once more demonstrated its incapacity to function efficiently as a legislature for the District of Columbia. Part of the original difficulty arose out of the fact that no one in Congress was fully informed as to the need of wartime housing here. That is not surprising, for Washington is not represented in either house by a spokesman of any kind. Confusion naturally arises out of this political void. The result is that Congress has to work particularly hard on legislation for the Capital, and that work falls heavily upon members who are busy with national affairs and the problems of their own districts. In the circumstances sound legislation promptly enacted is perhaps too much to expect.

The wartime housing bill could not have been handled by a local government even if the District had a city council of its own. So it unmistakably points to the need for better relations between the community and its legislature. And it is difficult to see how those relations can be improved much until this city of more than 800,000 residents is granted representation in the body that governs it. A tactful representative of the District might have ironed out all of the relatively petty controversies which have delayed the construction of wartime housing in the Capital for many months. It is incredible that Congress is willing to muddle through performances of this sort year after year without the help of even so much as a District spokesman to interpret the will of the community and carry part of the load of detailed legislative work.

Congress itself has thus provided a strong argument for the delegate which Representative Paddock proposes to give the District. Of course, a delegate would not take the place of full-fledged Representatives in Congress. But he could be of great assistance in pushing local bills through the legislative mill and in working out better relations between the District and its "city council." The housing-bill fiasco clearly gives the forthcoming measure authorizing the election of a District delegate a place of importance on the agenda of wartime legislation.

VOLUNTEER

There on the trail was one blue columbine,
The first this year and maybe now the last.
He sat with pine-breath blowing in his face
To let the white mist of his grief drift past.

Letting the reins fall loose on Chapo's neck,
And looping them around the saddle-horn,
He turned himself for one long backward look
At green shoots in his tilted patch of corn.

Seeing the corn, he felt its eager thrust
Push through his heart as it pushed through the loam.
He saw split rails which fenced in solitude
And curled blue smoke like peace above his home.

But war was now a vulture wheeling low
To feed on every countryside and town
And, since he loved the earth and quiet things,
He heel-kicked Chapo's flanks—and headed down.

Cost Should Count

When will America awaken to the fact that we must do more than "Remember Pearl Harbor" to win this war? We must fight wisely—make every bullet count! And since dollars are bullets we must make every dollar as effective as possible in the total war effort.

If America loses—and God forbid—it will be because of overconfidence. The record of the past is full of contests lost through overconfidence—on the gridiron, in world diplomacy, in war. The superior contestant piddles along, wastes his strength and his resources, until suddenly opportunity has passed and he is defeated!

America has not learned that her resources are not unlimited, that her strength and her money must be marshaled for the primary objective—to win the war as soon as possible. We have neither the time, the men, the resources, nor the money to waste. But we have not learned that. From top to bottom in the armed forces the attitude is "Cost does not matter—victory is all that counts." True, but we may not attain victory if that idea is distorted into license for uncurbed waste of men and money. There is prodigal waste—here in Washington. Endless expansion of offices and functions that contribute not one whit to the war effort. Office frills which Government has never felt it could afford in peace and which it is far less able to afford in this life and death struggle. Men from civil life turned officers, young lieutenants turned colonels, over night, all exposed to mass megalomania and many already afflicted, setting up fine offices, requisitioning expensive office equipment and accessories for more unessential paper work, duplicating functions that can be carried on more effectively by civil agencies, if these functions are really necessary. Duplication in aviation, communications, engineering, education, information services, meteorology, research and so on. Duplication by able-bodied officers who are desperately needed at the front to stem the Axis offensive.

We must have national unity, and we must give full support to the military—but just now I know of no more patriotic service our statesmen, our commentators and our public men could render than to campaign constructively for more realism—realism of the kind the Germans have had from the beginning, the kind that enabled Russia to hold out. Let us win the war first and leave administrative luxuries until we are sure we can indulge ourselves without jeopardizing our national security.

WM. BRYAN.
Washington, June 21.

The Enemy Is Here

If, as we have been told, we are in this war to save America, why do we have our fighting forces all over the world, and yet permit such submarine disasters with continued loss of life, etc., as have been occurring in our own home waters this long time. Also, why permit the landing of Japs on our very soil, the Aleutian Islands, without routing and subduing them at once, instead of letting them creep upon us until they really have a hold?

It's high time that something was done about this before that fatal "too late" rings in our own ears and, we too, will have cause for regrets.

Pledge To Hitler

It may appear to be somewhat uncalled for and be termed propaganda by some, but why not call our Nation and the people of our Allied Nations to attention, and all together make a confession and a solemn promise. It would help each of us to confirm our common cause and instill in our minds that, although we're separated by miles of water and land, we're right together until we have won.

What would most people say to setting a date as "Acknowledgment Day" or "Understanding Day" when each of us, in our thoughts, in our speech and in all the other means of expression at our command, might direct this acknowledgment to Adolf Hitler:

"Herr Hitler, we (the United Nations) admit you were right when you said the democratic peoples are weak and are confused in their decisions and will suffer losses. We admit we were living an easy, free, and happy life, and that it was very hard for us to realize a state of war when comforts must be sacrificed. Democratic people are like that. But these admissions only make it easier to realize such mistakes and proceed with confidence. We're blaming all of us as a whole for any mistakes made.

"We realize how you united the German people, but we shall not use force and tell our people to fight for freedom because "freedom" is a part of each of us. You and your murderers are trying to destroy that part of us. Some of us are just now realizing this. All of us know the answer now and we have temporarily given up the comforts and joy that democracy affords us because you have challenged our rights. You have murdered innocent people and will murder more. By our code of laws we will punish the murderer by his own death. We, the United Nations, the victims of your conquered lands, and even the free-thinking people of your own country will deal out that punishment without any pretention towards compromise."

WHY NOT?
Washington, June 24.

Purposeful Setbacks

The present setbacks on the front show clearly how history repeats itself, and that, therefore, we all must be more united, pray, work, sacrifice and encourage our leaders.

When Pharaoh said to Moses that he did not know his God and that he is not in their books, God sent him 10 plagues. How many more plagues will the present destroyer of religion get, when he says that he has taken the Lord's place and all religions be banished and he be recognized as the only one. After each plague the Lord sent over Egypt the dictator got more bold and vicious. The followers of Moses did not turn against him nor wanted to replace him, but they had faith in God and of their final deliverance. We must do the same, and know that every setback is to make everyone, who has locked his door and heart to the appeals of the persecuted refugees know the enemy's tortures and how it feels when one needs outside help, as well as make every one realize that we are our brother's keepers. The Lord wants the enemies to spread out all over so that they can be more thoroughly weeded out for all times. ANNA LANSBURGH.
Washington, June 24.

Love Thy Neighbor

The strike at the Hudson Naval Ordnance Arsenal, in which one group of employes refused to work because another group of a darker hue was hired, gave rise to your editorial, "Democracy at Home," and "caused Goebbels' propaganda agents to shout with joy."

It was a concrete manifestation of labor and management's "desire to carry out President Roosevelt's instructions to avoid racial discrimination." It shows "progress has been made in overcoming discriminations against Negroes in 'an' industry . . . heretofore regarded as the monopoly of white workers." Behind this strike there is to be found "much to hearten us and confirm our confidence in the steady advance of democratic ideals at home while we fight for their preservation abroad."

Had the editorial been stopped at the end of the first three paragraphs, it would have been hailed as a real message from a great democratic newspaper. But the fourth and last paragraph dispels that idea.

"Of course," you say, "it is not incumbent upon believers in democratic institutions and governmental forms to treat all their fellowmen alike. Everyone has likes and dislikes, based on racial, religious or purely personal grounds. Nobody is compelled to work alongside another man of a different color against his will."

It is true that our supreme law of the land does not "compel" men to love their neighbors, nor "to treat all their fellowmen alike." It has ever been the purpose of this law to legislate morals only enough to protect the individual from society and society from the individual. It is, however, the demands of the communal life which make it "incumbent" upon men to do so. Each, regardless of race, color or creed, is an important link in the chain which holds together the community, the State, the Nation. When and if any one of these links is weakened or broken, the whole human society is disturbed.

If the successful prosecution of our war efforts demands that we forget our personal, petty peeves, it is reasonable to believe that the state of affairs which now confronts us would never have arisen had not these peeves existed.

I. H. PARKER.
Washington, June 23.

Silver And Profit

Compton I. White, M. C., wants to fool us into thinking that Government wishes a profit by paying 71 cents an ounce for silver worth possibly 10 cents on the day the Government stops buying! He's a simple soul. If Lincoln had asked him: "How many legs has a sheep if you call its tail a leg?" he would have said five!

His formula is simple. The Government pays 71 cents for domestic silver and 35 cents for foreign, then it calls the value $1.29; and Mr. White calls the difference "profit" and figures it up over a billion dollars.

What pikers these silverites are! Why don't they pass a law calling the value of silver $129 an ounce? Then they could call all the national debt paid with the "profit."

The Government has some 15 or 20 billions in gold put away in cold storage and if the circulation warranted, could issue that much perfectly sound paper money. Up to the value of gold, just print paper money and call it "profit," 100 per cent profit, Mr. White. Paying 71 cents an ounce is just a waste of money, just cuts the "profit" that much. TABBY.

The Post Impressionist

Munchen

It was in 1936, just after the occupation of the Ruhr. There was no sign of any unusual activity in Munich that autumn. You heard about secret meetings, and tortures in cellars, but I was an English girl. I only heard about them.

"So you don't have any butter, do you?" I asked on that first day with the Ganters. The boys suppressed their laughter.

"Oh, it is so funny," laughed Karl. "That is what they tell you in England—ya? And you believe it, too!"

I ate my rich soup and the sausages floating in hot water. Cold slaw with potato salad was followed by cheese, black bread and—butter. But then the radio announcer began to talk in earnest. Suddenly they stopped eating. Unconsciously they stole glances at me. I heard the word "England" several times.

Munich was peaceful. The leaves were bright yellow and red as Karl and I walked down Maximillian Strasse. Good German folk pedaled past us on their bicycles. So many bicycles, and so few cars. And the people on them so often looked thin, and their faces were heavily lined. Their clothes had not much shape about them, and seemed all the same color—brown or blue green—so much of that blue green.

"England could never survive another war," said Karl with that intense expression so typical of Germans, especially young ones.

"And so Hitler wants a war," I observed almost from force of habit.

"No, no. Hitler does not want a war! No. He wants peace. But if England will not listen—why then, he may have to go to war!"

"This is the broadest, straightest, whitest, smoothest road I have ever been on," I said, as we sped along the famous Ottobahn to the Bavarian hills, "but in these 40 miles we've only passed one car!" Karl looked inscrutable as he answered, "One day it will be useful!" I did not know then that at a word Hitler's panzer division would thunder along this great artery straight to the borders of Czecho-Slovakia.

Oh, it was very beautiful in those hills! The fairyland of Brunhilde, and of the goblins of Arthur Raccan. The air was keen. We were hungry. We walked up and up to the ski hut, near the top of the mountain. We met many people walking with heavy packs on their backs, up and up and up. "In England," I thought guiltily, "we don't go in for this sort of thing quite so seriously." I thought of my brothers lounging lazily before the fire, their legs thrown up over the chimney-piece, a book dangling idly from their hands, a pipe between their teeth . . .

"It is important," said Karl to me, "to make the body strong!"

"Mine is, and always has been!" I panted indignantly.

"Naw!" said Karl, his eyes serious and kind. "Naw. You are out of breath. Breathe de-e-e-ply! So." And he did. "And your shoes," he went on, "they are too thin. They will not last." They didn't. There was practically nothing left of them when we got back.

"I would like to go to America," said Karl. That was after we had walked through woods so indescribably beautiful that no man walking there could have spoken of things that were untrue.

"But you are a lawyer!" I said, astonished.

"I know it," said Karl, and there was a strangely flat tone in his voice, "but there is no future here for me. You cannot practice the law as you wish . . ." He spoke quickly "I am going to study engineering at the university next year. I want to go to America . . ."

"But you are very deeply fond of your country," I said "Could you bear to leave Munich for good?"

"Oh!" cried Karl, and his eyes blazed. "I only want to make some money in America. I should settle in Munchen. Ya. I should always want to come back to Munchen."

Frau Ganter did not know what to think of Karl's ambition to go to America. She was a fine looking woman with steel gray hair, and a ready smile in a face of character. But sometimes when she was tired, she looked pathetic in her cheap little black hat and coat. One day, when the radio announcer was being more emphatic than ever, she stood looking out over the roofs of Munich. She turned suddenly to me. "Turn it off!" she said. And then, "I don't know. Oh, I don't know . . ." Did she see the whole thing coming again. The whole sickening parade of war that had taken her husband?

At home things were very different. It was a relief to find everyone so comfortably nonchalant. There was none of that burning tension. But later I had a letter from Karl.

"I do not think any more of going to America," it ran. "I see my way clearly now. My duty is at home. There is much for me to do here!"

It was inevitable, then. The Nazis were too strong.

ELISABETH GRAVELY.

Our War Outlook

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Roosevelt-Churchill Statement

THE Roosevelt-Churchill statement balances the unfavorable against the favorable. It conforms to the known facts. Although the President and the Prime Minister have a mass of information which is not printable, and in many cases is not known outside the highest circles, it apparently does not drastically alter the broad picture which every intelligent and attentive citizen can see for himself.

LINDLEY

War production, on the whole, is good and getting better. The main problem is transportation. On the positive side, the building of ships, the outlook is favorable. On the negative side, loss of tonnage, no promises are made, but a cautious note of hopefulness is struck.

The Chinese are to be aided—although how and to what extent is not disclosed. But the problem has been considered in detail by the military experts. Russia is promised that German strength will be diverted from the Eastern front. This must mean more than heavy air attacks on German industries, communications centers and cities. Competent military experts assert that there is no evidence that air attacks thus far have diverted any German strength from the East. Certainly they divert no panzer divisions or other ground troops; and probably they divert little, if any, of the Luftwaffe.

GROUND OPERATIONS in Europe by British and American troops are clearly implied, although the time and scale naturally are not revealed. They might be only enlarged commando raids of the nature of reconnaissance in force. But a sacred pledge to divert German strength from the attack on Russia has been given publicly.

The President and the Prime Minister agree that the "overall picture is more favorable to victory" than it was in either August or December of last year, when they met previously. This statement would be hard to dispute, and it is the basis for the fundamental optimism of both the President and the Prime Minister.

When they met last August off Newfoundland, most of the military experts thought the Russian army would be folded up or driven back to the Urals by mid-September. The President and Mr. Churchill had a more hopeful view, which was fortified by the report of Harry Hopkins, just back from Moscow. But no one could be sure. And if Russia had been lost last year, we would now be bracing ourselves for a ten-year war. In Russia the Germans suffered losses of man power which they cannot replace. They failed to get the raw materials for a long war. And even though the worst should happen, and the Russian army should be isolated and forced back to the Urals this summer, the Germans have lost a year and we have gained one.

LAST AUGUST the entire southwest Pacific lay wide open to Japanese invasion, lacking even the weak defenses which had been organized by December. There were signs that Hitler, after disposing of the Russians, would move through northwest Africa toward South America, in conjunction with attempts at a coup d'etat in several Latin American nations. And even the North Atlantic lifeline between the United States and Great Britain had not been thoroughly secured.

In December, when they met again, the global war had become a reality. Although the weakness of the defenses of Malaya, Singapore, East Indies and Burma had not been fully exposed, the damage wrought at Pearl Harbor was known; and it was only too clear that the war strength of the United States was only partly mobilized and could not reach a peak before 1943.

At that time, American public attention was centered on the Pacific. Secretary of the Navy Knox was widely criticized for saying that Hitler was still the stronger enemy; and it would have been easy for the United States to lose sight of global strategy in its eagerness to have the earliest possible revenge for the Japanese assault.

DURING THE winter and spring months there was no little professional military criticism of the British and American leaders for continuing to disperse their forces instead of concentrating immediately for attack. The decision to reenforce Australia, for example, may have been inspired as much by political as military considerations. But that does not mean that it was wrong.

While certain defensive outposts may be further strengthened, Anglo-American strategy is gradually moving into the offensive stage. From now on a very considerable part of their power can be concentrated for attack. Time will be required.

There have been setbacks since the President and the Prime Minister met in December and January. There probably will be more setbacks, perhaps extremely serious reverses. But there can be no doubt that the outlook is better now than it was last August, when we had not yet fully awakened to our peril, or last December and January.

A Blueprint For Peace

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

America Must Lead

A "blueprint" for "winning a just and durable peace" was presented by Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, yesterday on Western Maryland College campus at Westminster. He addressed the second annual young adult assembly of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church.

In what he termed "The Christian Manifesto," he called upon America to "take the leadership in establishing a sovereign power among the community of nations, and in establishing now a world government which will admit as a member any State which submits to its constitutional provisions.

"We pledge ourselves to work toward the prompt realization of a standard of living economy throughout the world," the manifesto further declared. "In this economic order we summon nations, and individuals to contribute according to their ability and to share according to their needs."

Any plan for a just and durable world peace "must begin in our own back yard," Dr. F. L. Gibbs of Nashville, Tenn., declared in his address.

In a moving message that left many of his hearers with moist eyes, Dr. Gibbs warned that Americans must begin now to "win the peace" by eradicating racial prejudice, economic exploitation and other community evils in their own neighborhoods.

Dr. Gibbs, representative of the Methodist board of education, spoke in Baker Chapel at the Sunday morning worship service.

Dr. Gibbs said the responsibility for a Christian social order rested largely on the shoulders of young adults, and challenged to reach millions of their age group (24 to 40) who, he said, have been lost to the church.

He pointed out that such an age group represented those disillusioned during the postwar era by never fulfilled promises in the realm of a new Christian world order. We lost the last peace, he said, because we waited until after the war was won to begin thinking about peace.

Striking at racial discrimination, Dr. Gibbs made a fervent plea that white people treat the Negroes as ladies and gentlemen, "to at least help restore the Negroes' self-respect."

He assailed policies which he said barred Negroes from certain service ranks. Tests at Tuskegee Institute had proven, he said, that Negroes have the ability to become the world's greatest airplane pilots of their inherent sense of rhythm.

Dr. John W. Rustin, at the annual assembly banquet Saturday night in the Science Hall, called for more enthusiasm for democracy to make it more workable. "Our democracy has been weakened because we have lost our enthusiasm for it," he declared. "We need to express ourselves about the elements that are trying to destroy democracy."

Walter Graham of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington, was reappointed assembly dean and director of adult work for the Baltimore Conference. In private life he is director of training in the personnel division, General Accounting Office.

Conference officers elected were Catherine Potter, Central Methodist Church, West Baltimore District, secretary; James Wynn, Highland Avenue Methodist Church, South Baltimore, treasurer; Grover Hatman, Foundry Methodist Church, Washington, chairman of curriculum; Fulton Stretton, Emory Methodist Church, Washington, fellowship chairman; William Brown, Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington, social action chairman, and Carol Arnold, Mount Vernon Church, publicity chairman.

Stabilizing Wages

By Mark Sullivan

A Problem Facing The WLB

NEXT WEDNESDAY, July 1, the War Labor Board at Washington will hold a hearing on a key dispute—the demand of CIO unions in the steel industry for an increase in wages (also for a union shop). What the board does will go far toward answering the question whether it is possible to prevent a broad rise in cost of living, and ultimate inflation. If the board grants the full demand of the union, an increase of a dollar a day, the result, for psychological reasons and material ones, would probably disrupt the existing rough equilibrium of wages, cost of living, and prices of goods generally.

SULLIVAN

For some time past, cost of living has really been kept in check. It was on April 28 that President Roosevelt addressed the country on a 7-point program for avoiding rise in prices. Some two months thereafter, Price Administrator Leon Henderson was able to announce that there had actually been a drop in the cost of living. Even though the drop was faint, it was the first time in 19 consecutive months when cost of living did not go up.

IN THE PRESIDENT'S 7 points, the most direct were three: Fix ceilings on prices of goods, stabilize wages, stabilize farm prices. The first of these steps, ceilings on prices, was taken by Price Administrator Henderson in May, and his action was the principal factor in bringing the present check in cost of living.

But, unless the other two steps are taken, Mr. Henderson's price ceilings will blow up. These two steps—stable crop prices and stable wages—are geared into each other. What happens to one, is certain to happen to the other.

In crop prices, a fairly stable level now exists. It is achieved partly through an act of Congress, partly by the Department of Agriculture. But the real dependence for keeping crop prices where they are is the state of mind of the farmers. At present they are generally content.

But if the farmers see a marked increase in the wages of labor in industry, they will demand higher prices for their crops, and will get them. With that, the whole mechanism for avoiding inflation would go haywire.

THE FARMER resents increase of wages in industry for two reasons. First, it makes his own labor problem difficult. Farmers as a rule cannot pay labor a higher wage than something like 50 cents an hour, for a 60-hour week, $30 a week in all. When the farmer, and the farm hand, see workers in steel mills, not especially skilled, get wages as high as $1 an hour for a 40-hour week, with $1.50 an hour for overtime—in that condition, it is difficult to keep labor on the farm. Indeed, even many a farm owner realizes that he would do better for himself if he would stop his farm operations, sell his stock and machinery, and go to work in a war industry. Some farm owners have done this. Also, increases of wages in industry cause higher prices for what the farmer must buy. If the War Labor Board grants an increase of $1 a day in the steel industry, the farmer's contentment with present crop price will evaporate in emotional irritation, with prompt political and economic effects.

The stabilizing of wages is in the hands of the President and his administration. He kept it there in his 7-point program and throughout his whole attitude about labor. For stabilizing wages the Administration has several agencies, none of them having much real power. The War Labor Board can refuse to sanction increases of wages, such as the one now demanded in the steel industry. But the Labor Board can only act when there is a dispute. And in some cases, increases of wages can come about without dispute—that is, through demand by unions, and voluntary agreement by employers.

INCREASES can come about in yet other ways. One is by an employer offering higher wages in order to attract labor away from competitors. To prevent this, Mr. Paul McNutt has some power, through the various agencies he heads. He can hold that employers must hire labor only through the Government's official employment agency. Price Administrator Henderson has some power—by keeping down the prices a manufacturer can charge for his product, he can prevent the manufacturer from raising wages. The Government officials who give out contracts for war materials have some power to prevent the contractors from raising wages. Some vague and informal power over wage rates is exercised through the close personal relations between some Government officials and labor leaders. In some cases Government officials try to persuade heads of a given industry to agree upon stable wage rates in such industry.

But the whole of the Administration's power to stabilize wages is a loose, unorganized thing, having many holes and at nearly all points weak. It rests on no specific act of Congress, but mainly on the discretion of officials. And as a rule the discretion of officials tends to be sympathetic toward increases in wage-rates, for the Administration as a whole is sympathetic toward labor leaders and unions. The trend of wage-rates is upward.

Next week's case, the demand of unions for higher wages in the steel industry—is concrete and publicly conspicuous. In it, the Government officials concerned, the War Labor Board, have real authority and responsibility. Their decision will be a formal, official act. It will be watched from many sources, especially farmers. It will be certain to have effects on the wage level generally, the price level generally, and the prospect of avoiding inflation.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear Oscar:

I inclose a newspaper picture which I clipped the other night. It is of a group of soldiers strolling with some colleens in Ireland and unless I am greatly mistaken one of the boys in the picture is you. You seem to be having a grand time and it hardly coincides with what you say about me being the only girl in your life.

I do not mind your having a little fun, and I realize how you must hunger for companionship, but you look far too happy in this picture and I do not like it.

I feel very blue about it. Perhaps I am expecting too much of you, and it might be better if we did not correspond any more. Yours as ever, HARRIET.

• • • •

Dear Harriet:

That was not my picture I don't think. But I do not want to be too positive on account of I am not sure of anything in this war. There is always something happening and of coarse pictures is always being took and sometimes there are girls around. I do not think I have seen no colleens and I guess this picture is of a jeep who is my double, although I don't think he even looks like I.

What is more even if it should turn out I am the one in this picture you should not have no reason to worry as it wood be nothing serious and I hope you read that new order from Secretary Stimson witch makes it impossible for a jeep to get married on forrin soil even if things took a serious turn.

• • • •

This orders says that no soldier can get married without the permission of his commanding officer and it has all the boys a little soar on account of so many was either marrying or about to be married. I gess I am about the only American single soldier on forrin soil who did not ask no girl to marry him. I do not mean that I am no hermitt, Harriet. I am orful lonesome and I like to meet girls for socialability but I have never come close to getting serious, and from now on if I should get smote in a joustle with Cupid I wood have to get a general's consent and I certainly do not stand well with the general here or I wood not get all them dirty jobs witch I am always picked to do.

• • • •

The way the boys was going romantic in this Army was something for the book. You wood think the arsenal of the democrats had gone lovesick and that most of the jeeps thought all out war meant they must do nothing halfway. But I seen plenty of officers going for these dolls also and I wood like to know whose permission a officer, espeshully a general, has to get if he loses his head and decides to get hitched.

• • • •

Now the people in these forrin places are swell to us. They give us a grate reception and the girls are wonderful to us. They are very pretty and vivaceous but I wood not give no hair of your head for a roomful of them. So do not worry Harriet. Secretary Stimson is looking out for us both. I still keep your picture close to my breast but I wood like another one on account of I sent it to the laundry by mistake and was lucky to get it back. All my love, OSCAR.

Dane King Recuperating

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) June 28 (AP).—King Christian X of Denmark is recuperating from an attack of Jaundice, a Copenhagen dispatch said today. The monarch was reported to have sat up for a while yesterday for the first time since he went to the hospital on June 8.

The Point At Issue

By Barnet Nover

Production Is Not Enough

LAST WEEK President Roosevelt announced that the United States had produced during May nearly 4000 planes, more than 1500 tanks, nearly 2000 pieces of artillery and antitank guns and well over 100,000 machine guns and submachine guns.

NOVER

The American people and their allies have reason to be gratified by these figures, particularly since we have only just begun to flex our industrial muscles. Before this year is out our production of implements of war will be at a rate that will put our present output very much in the shade and will be far beyond the combined capacity of Germany, Italy, Japan and their satellites to match.

BUT THE PRESIDENT'S revelations produced few cheers in this country. The week in which he made known what our war industries are doing was the week which saw Tobruk captured and Marshal Rommel sweeping into Egypt, saw the heroic but outnumbered Russian garrison at Sevastopol slowly but inexorably giving ground, saw the loss to the Nazis of the important Ukrainian railroad junction of Kupyansk.

Yes, we are winning the battle of production, winning it hands down. But we have not yet succeeded in translating industrial output into military advantage and until we do we cannot afford, as the President did well to remind us, to become overconfident.

THE PRESIDENT pointed out that production figures had been kept secret in the past "because they might give aid and comfort to the enemy." The current production figures, he added, will "give the Axis just the opposite of aid and comfort."

He is quite right. It is doubtful, however, if the Axis has ever underestimated America's industrial capacity. Hitler and the Japanese militarists have never been under any illusions as to what we can do once aroused. They are certainly under no illusions now. Indeed, their present strategy is predicated on the assumption that while they have been outdistanced in the production race there is still time for them to win the war.

PRODUCTION alone is not enough to insure victory. Production is only one factor in a complicated equation some of whose other factors are transportation, tactical skill and time.

There is no question that in the recent Libyan campaign it was the enemy that demonstrated the greater tactical skill. Yet had it been possible for us to divert to Libya a half or even a quarter of what we produced in the month of May alone all of Rommel's genius might not have sufficed to give him victory.

Even a tenth of our monthly production, could it be transported during the next few weeks to China, would make all the difference in the outcome of the tremendously important struggle now raging in Chekiang Province. A few hundred additional planes would have saved Burma, Singapore, Malaya, the Philippines.

We had those planes. But not where they were needed. The planes and tanks and guns required to stop Rommel may be on hand in Egypt. But if they are not it will make no immediate difference so far as the outcome of the struggle for Suez is concerned whether our production is rising or not. For even if we had the ships time is lacking to get them to the North African theater with sufficient speed to affect the outcome.

THE AXIS is banking on precisely this state of affairs to win them victory. They know they cannot beat us in production. They feel confident, however, that they can crush us or cripple us before that production can make itself felt on the battlefield.

The U-boat campaign in the Western Atlantic, the landing of trained saboteurs on our shores, the drive on Suez, the attempt to destroy the Red army's last foothold in the Crimea, the offensive in the Ukraine, the Japanese landing on the Aleutians—these and other actions are all part of a single-minded effort to win the war before the American industrial machine gets into high gear, before we can place the weapons we produce into the hands of our troops and airmen and the troops and airmen of our Allies.

IN HIS brilliant volume, "Prelude to Victory," which has just come off the press, James D. Reston makes the illuminating point that "we have been watching this war for so long now that we tend to remember only the end of each campaign and forget the beginning."

The cycle of our defeats began not with Pearl Harbor but years earlier when we failed to understand the nature of the enemy we had ultimately to fight, the nature of the problem we faced, the essentials of a policy of victory.

Since Pearl Harbor we have been trying desperately to make up for lost time. So far as production is concerned we have been doing a brilliant job. But if the enemy is conscious of our potential strength he is also aware of our weaknesses. He is striking hard to multiply the second and divide the first. And we cannot afford to underrate the possibility that he will succeed. The decisive period of the war is upon us.

More Negroes Must Be Hired In War Plants, Says McNutt

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Immediate expansion of in-plant training programs and employment of more Negroes in war industries was called for yesterday by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Man Power Commission.

Increase in apprentice training was urged by the man power director in commenting on a progress report of the apprenticeship section recently transferred from the Department of Labor to the Federal Security Agency. The report showed that the training of more than 500,000 war workers has helped solve 97,000 in-plant problmes in war industries.

Hire More Negroes, He Says

The call for increased employment of Negroes in war industries was made by Chairman McNutt in a speech before the National Conference of Negro Youths in New York City.

Relating the long history of the Negro in America, the chairman praised their efforts in the cause of freedom and pointed out that Negroes are being used today in all branches of the war industry.

"But we are not using Negroes enough," he added.

"There are still too many employers who stipulate on their hiring schedules that certain jobs are barred to Negroes. There are still too many who hire them only for certain service jobs or assign them to work below their best skill.

"Such employers are protecting their prejudices at the cost of production for victory.

"And America cannot stand that kind of nonsense."

All-Round Workers Needed

With regard to the need for in-plant training, the man power director said that all-around workers are needed not only for supervisors and foremen for the tremendously expanded labor supply in war production plants, but they are needed too as lead, set-up and quartermen and for installation, maintenance and repair work.

"Bona fide apprenticeship remains the quickest and soundest way of producing this kind of labor," he continued. "Apprentices, for whom special selection on the basis of qualifications and aptitudes is made, contribute to production almost immediately. As they gain in dexterity and knowledge, they become increasingly valuable to the work."

Chairman McNutt derided "any notion that because the average term for apprentices is four years, they are nonimportant in war industries. He urged that they be taken in and given credit for previous shop experience.

Reds Say Nazis Gas Peasants

Moscow, June 28 (AP).—The Russian news agency, Tass, in a dispatch from the Kalinin front, said today there was evidence that German punitive detachments had used poison gas against "recalcitrant" peasants, accused of helping guerillas.

Nine D. C. Men Mentioned in Service News

Nine Washingtonians were mentioned in Army and Navy dispatches received here yesterday.

Maj. Alfred P. Thom of 2220 Twentieth Street Northwest, it was announced, has been assigned to the Supply Division of the Army ground forces.

Reported in training with the Army Air Force at Miami Beach, Fla., were Capt. Charles F. Menzel, 4119 Eighteenth Place Northeast; Lieut. Rice M. Terrill, 1101 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest; Lieut. Charles W. Fitzgerald, 2227 Twentieth Street Northwest; Lieut. Richard L. Trainor, 100 Rodney Road, Silver Spring, and Lieut. Jerome S. Wolf, 4221 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

First Lieut. Francis H. Smith of the Octo Apartments, Thirteenth and O Streets Northwest, has been assigned to the air force preflight school at Maxwell Field, Ala., with a title of assistant special services officer.

Stanley M. Dunn, formerly of 201 Second Street Northeast, has completed primary flight training, and will be transferred to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., for advanced training, before being commissioned as an ensign in the Naval Reserve, or a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Before joining the Army five years ago, Major Thom was a local practicing physician. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and George Washington University. Before his latest assignment he attended the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Captain Menzel was a superintendent of construction with the United States Army Engineers before joining the Air Force.

Lieutenant Terrill was an attorney for the Veterans Bureau; Lieutenant Fitzgerald, assistant trust officer of the National Savings & Trust Co.; Lieutenant Wolf manager of the Fort Stevens pharmacy, and Lieutenant Smith a Latin teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School.

Anti-Axis Demonstrations In Brazil Bring Nazi Threat

(The following dispatch is of enemy origin and may have been released for propaganda purposes.)

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 28 (AP).—The German government, calling attention to what it charged were increasing anti-German manifestations in Brazil, said today it "will take countermeasures" unless the Brazilian government "puts an end to these grievances."

A formal statement called the treatment of Germans in Brazil "persecution" and placed the blame largely upon Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, who announced Brazil's termination of relations with the Axis at the Pan-American foreign ministers conference in Rio de Janeiro last January.

The government communique referred to various incidents in which it said Germans were the objects of riotous demonstrations in Brazil, declared that country's anti-Axis stand "did not correspond with the feeling of the Brazilian people" and called President Roosevelt one of the main instigators of the Brazilian government's action.

Post Staff Photos

TWENTY-FIVE girls from all sections of the Nation, 23 of them Government employes, have found no difficulty in solving the question in that familiar Washington dirge: "Where to find comfortable living quarters?"

In the building that houses the Federation of Churches, at 1751 N Street Northwest, are rooms so homelike in design that their occupants jealously guard the open secret that an office also can provide ample space for a girls' dormitory.

Sizes of the room vary from a tremendous space for four girls to smaller single accommodations. The building also offers maid service, a big kitchen available for general use on request, a library where dates may be entertained, and a little backyard suitable for picnics.

A CASUAL observer might wonder idly how a somewhat drab office could foster the usually gay atmosphere of a girls' school. The answer is simple at the Federation of Churches buildings; its occupants, all young, live in the accepted sorority house manner.

Minnie Drexilius, affectionately known as "Miss Drex" to the girls, has been the house mother there for many years, but at present is on a short leave of absence under doctor's orders. She plans to return around August 1, and meanwhile Mrs. Albert Spangler is serving in her place.

A CROSS-SECTION of residents shows that most of them work for the War or Navy Departments, with others in Treasury, Interior and Agriculture. Some have to commute as far away as Arlington; others, like Audrey Warrior, a full-blooded American Indian from Montana, are within easy walking distance of their offices.

Audrey, who has been in Washington for five years, works for the Fish and Wild Life Institute at Dupont Circle.

THERE is one "sister act" in the building—Marian and Betty Wood came to Washington from Illinois, and are two of the quartet in the largest bedroom in the house. Marian is in the War Production Board and Betty works for the telephone company.

One of the girls, Laura Higgins, an invalid, lives on the fourth floor and uses the self-service elevator for her trips below. She goes to her office in the War Department each day by taxi.

With conditions akin to their own homes in California or Florida or New England, the girls at 1751 N Street agree that Heaven and the Federation of Churches make an excellent combination to "protect the working girl."

Chevy Chase Congregations, Other Churches Unite in Outdoor Services

CHEVY CHASE Protestant congregations united in services last night on the lawn of All Saints Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase Circle, where the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, preached the sermon.

Religion is not an illusion, as so many people believe, but the direct opposite, Rev. Mr. Clark told the congregation. His subject was, "What Is Religion?"

"True belief, which is reflected in our daily lives," he said, "is the sense of relationship with the Eternal Creator, and comes to its most vivid experience in the human heart through faith in Jesus Christ. Religion is thus an experience of kinship with the deepest reality of the universe.

"Religion thus described expresses itself in many ways," he continued. "We pray to God and we praise His works by marveling at their wonder and beauty. These are two expressions of faith.

"Brotherhood and morality are also inspired by true religion. The brotherhood of man finds its valid basis only in the fatherhood of God. To travel from our comfortable homes to the forlorn shacks of Washington's alley dwellers without loss of memory is a good example of the feeling for our fellowman which religion inspires."

"Finally", the cleric said, "religion finds expression in a satisfying philosophy of life. Because of its deeper hold on reality religion takes the complex elements that make up our lives and helps to transform some, to transmute others, and to make all experience meaningful and worth while." Religion makes one a child of God and thus life takes on a glorious meaning for time and eternity."

THE thirty-fifth season of open-air services in Lincoln Park, Eleventh and East Capitol Streets, began in the afternoon under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Inter-Church Committee. The initial program was conducted by the Berean Men's Bible Class of Ninth Street Christian Church. The Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of that congregation, made the main address.

"For the first time in history the means to commit race suicide is in our hands and we are well on the way to doing it," Mr. Roberts said in commenting on the inability of science and knowledge to help us in our quest for real happiness.

"How can we live and be happy?" The pastor asked. "This question must be answered, for it is the crux of things. But neither modern knowledge nor modern science have provided the answer. The one has not saved us from personal loss and catastrophe; the other, although it has been a boon to many, has served largely to build instruments of destruction.

"Of what avail is modern culture?" Mr. Roberts continued. "Through it we seem to be more likely to destroy ourselves than to build an enduring world based on unity and justice where we can live happily.

"'Victory in war must be followed by the individual's triumph over his ego and his tendency to remain disunited in order to further his own blind and selfish ends. In such a course, and only in such a course, lies the salvation of mankind.

"Jesus alone can point to solution for our difficulties." Mr. Roberts said. "'His authority and his inspiration are the only motivating forces which can change mankind from within.

"Jesus" authority for life has already astonished the world. It is based upon love, as opposed to lust, the desire for physical possession, hate, malice, revenge and greed.

"Our competitive world of greed, hate, selfishness," he concluded, "hardly represents a real advance, and has only led us to conflict and disaster. We need more than dependence upon brute force. We must have a vital faith in the reality and power of unseen spiritual forces. This is victory."

FIRST SOLEMN HIGH MASS—Father William A. Horigan, S. J. (left), extends best wishes to his cousin, Father James B. Horigan, S. J., whom he assisted at his first Solemn High Mass yesterday in Dahlgren Chapel at Georgetown University. Father James Horigan was ordained June 21 at Woodstock, Md.

"Today's bitter sufferings will but make us more perfect, just as His sufferings made Christ more perfect," Dr. Foelsch said in a sermon on "Life in Tune With God." Parts of his talk were illustrated on the violin by Soren Lura.

"Work, play, love and suffering are integral parts of life in tune with God," the minister said. "Suffering—how sharply life is teaching us this these bitter days—suffering is not the least of these.

"Everywhere, the world over, there are broken hearts and troubled souls, mourning in the presence of the ruins of life and asking, with agony in their voices, 'Why?'

"There is only one solution to the problem," Dr. Felsch stated. "One finds it at the Cross of Calvary, where God Himself is bearing agony for the sake of His people. The 'Captain of our salvation' was made perfect through suffering. The suffering Cross does not spell defeat, but victory at the last. So with the sorrows of God's people; He turns their sufferings into songs when the bitter hour is gone, and their grief into glory, when they go on bravely in His faith."

AS the Rev. Harry V. Porter yesterday marked the eighth anniversary of his pastorate at Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Chuch, E near Seventh Street Southwest, he said, in part:

"The world in which we live is strangely similar to the world which crucified Christ. We, too, have our invading armies seeking world supremacy. We have our racial and national hatreds and prejudices. We have our wounded and bleeding bodies left beaten and half dead by the wayside. But, that same Christ is alive in our world today. He treads the dusty roads where fleeing refugees are being strated by following planes. He dwells at home with lonely hearts. He walks the decks and above the olly waters speaks the word of peace. Like those in a tug-of-war, he grips the rope and pulls with the right. By his holy life and high ideals he comes to grips with the wrong. Those same hands pierced by the nails grip the wounded, tortured bodies 'falling through space.'"

THE Rev. V. Charles Y. Aznakian, pastor of the Armenian Presbyterian Church, yesterday told his congregation at its service at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H Street Northwest: "Christianity is not a speculative system, not a 'naked ideology' as Platonism and Stoicism, but a living faith. It not only sheds light on the path of man, but gives power to walk in the path on which it sheds light. The doctrine that mere enlightenment, mere knowledge, will make men good and bring the Kingdom of God to the doorsteps of our social order is not indigenous to Christianity. It has its roots in classical philosophy. It was revived during the Renaissance, and ultimately found its way into modern Christianity when the latter lost its bearings for a while under the impact of the rise of modern science.

"But," he continued, "the impact of the ruthless realities of the last few years upon science has relegated the latter to its proper place—it has deflated science of its messianic consciousness and relegated it to a status of being only a department of life. Under these circumstances Christianity is rediscovering itself and picking up the threads of its message which it lost during its sojourn in secularism. It is discovering that it not only enlightens the path of man, but offers him the power to walk in that enlightened path. That power is faith."

Books and Films Amuse Yanks In Australia

Somewhere in Australia, June 28, Chaplain Lester C. Doerr of Grand Rapids, Mich., said today that entertainment programs keep the men of a big American contingent occupied in the evenings. While talking, he was busy with a group of officers arranging a screen and projector for a motion picture show.

One of the greatest boons to the men, the chaplain said, is a library of some 6000 books from anonymous donors in the United States, who sent them here carefully packed and catalogued. The enthusiasm and appreciation with which the men browse through the editions would delight the persons who provided the volumes.

Heavyweights Fail to Follow Sensible Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST overweights don't eat enough of the protective foods. they eat so many of the wrong things, they can't.

After going without the nutrients for a long time, you begin to crave them. Your system doesn't ring any bells to tell you that you are hungry for this vitamin or that mineral. All you know is that you're hungry for food. So you eat more of the foods you particularly like. If you don't happen to like the right ones, you are out of luck. You eat those high in calories—and keep getting fatter. As you can see, it is a vicious circle.

For the sake of health and weight, make your calories keep good company. They should furnish their rightful share of the nutrients. And when you cut down on your calorie intake to draw on your stored fat, make the calories you leave in your menus contribute even more of the protective elements than usual.

Yellow Nutrition Rules

To make dieting easy, follow the basic nutrition rule of eating what you should first. That rule applies to everyone, but particularly to those of you who weigh too much.

As soon as you make up your mind to reduce, you are apt to think it will be easier if you just skip breakfast. But that is no way to do it. You need a good breakfast. It should contribute more than starch and a stimulant. You need orange or tomato juice for Vitamin C, an egg for protein, iron and Vitamin A; whole wheat toast for minerals and Vitamin B, and then your coffee for an eye-opener.

Pint of Milk Daily

Your other two meals should include a pint of milk, skimmed while you are keeping your calories down, and a raw salad green and a cooked green to make up for the Vitamin A taken off with the cream; one other vegetable, which may be anything you like; a second fruit, which can well be dessert; a generous serving of lean meat, fish or fowl; and two more slices of whole grain or enriched bread and butter.

There's the entire list. You can play around with your menus as you please. But when you take a protective food out of one meal, be sure to put it back in one of the others. Don't leave anything out.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother's Every Effort to Restrain Baby Girl From Eating Mud and Pebbles Has Been in Vain; She Is Also Recalcitrant at Table; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with interest your article of June 24, addressed to the mother of 3-year-old twin boys. Perhaps you will be able to help me with a slightly different "behavior problem," concerning my small daughter, who is two and a half. She has a very bad habit of eating small rocks and mud. I have tried every means I can think of, to stop this habit; but so far I have failed.

I have talked with her, spanked her, made her stand in a corner, washed her mouth out with soap and pepper; and, as a last resort, have pretended to completely ignore the habit, hoping she would forget about it. I also consulted my physician on the subject; and he advised me just to forget about it. But I fear she may swallow a jagged rock and be injured internally.

Also, she is a little lazy about eating her food. She will feed herself only when she has done without two or three meals; or when we have something she especially likes, such as sweets or starches. At all other times, she insists that her nurse or mother should feed her; and begs us at the table to do so. She goes to the extreme of dishing up a spoonful of food and handing it to me, so that I, in turn, may put it in her mouth. Some of the tricks she uses in trying to get out of feeding herself are cute, I must admit; but they probably will develop into bad habits.

My practice thus far has been never to punish her for prankish behavior of a kind that would neither mar her character nor harm her physically; and I still believe it is a good practice. But I should appreciate any comment you see fit to make on the subject.

L. H. M.

Redirection of Interest, Not Discipline, Is Needed

DEAR L. H. M.: It is characteristic of infants and small children to chew on or try to swallow anything that can be conveyed to the mouth—including, in the case of infants, their own fists and toes. Therefore, a careful mother or nurse is always on the alert to prevent mishaps; but the child's innocently adventurous efforts of this kind should not be dramatized by an untoward display of adult concern, into an emotionally unforgettable experience. In the event they are, the incident is much more likely to be repeated than not. The small child requires educational, not disciplinary, handling, if he is to overcome his natural inclination to imitate the billygoat.

Educational handling, in such instances, means redirecting (or changing the nature of) the child's interest in the captivating foreign object. To get down to cases about your daughter's obstinately confirmed relish of mud and pebbles: You can afford to ignore the mud-eating, since it is not an uncommon practice among children her age, showing no ill effects and usually quickly outgrown. But there is a possibility, as you suggest, that her mischievous taste for pebbles could lead to physically harmful results. And in order to forestall this possibility, you should change the nature of her reaction to the rocks she finds.

To illustrate: Watch her closely at her outdoors play, and when you see her with a pebble in her hand or mouth, say quietly, with palm outstretched: "Let's see it, baby." If she spits it out, say: "What a nice rock! Let's save it. Let's see if we can find more." As she brings you more, as many more as she can find, praise each extravagantly in turn—as something unique on the face of the earth. You might aid in the search, finding two or three—but commenting that none are so remarkable as hers. When the time comes to go indoors, gather up the precious stones with her help and take them home, letting her carry them, if she will.

At home, make quite an occasion of translating them into her special treasure. Either they are something to be marveled over, in themselves, lined up on a shelf in her room, perhaps; to be admired from a distance, and to be added to tomorrow, and in all the outdoor playtimes to come. Or you might put them in an unbreakable jar with a detachable lid,—preferably a tin container,—sealing the lid on tight, so she cannot remove it, and let her play with the wonderful noisemaker. By such means, you might succeed in changing her "consumer's" interest in pebbles into an inventive or collector interest.

But suppose she continues, from the sheer reflex impulse of habit, to pop stones into her mouth. In that case, a change of play environment may be indicated. Where does she play outdoors? In your own yard? Does she have enough playmates to ward off boredom? Does she have a stimulating variety of toys, to keep mind and body constructively occupied? When she plays in the dirt, what implements has she, other than her two hands? Does she have a sand box and sand sifter? Does she have a bucket and shovel? A rake and hoe and watering can and a make-believe garden to tend? Does she have any gymnasium equipment? Or huge, light-weight wooden blocks for building a house or a castle or even a whole row of houses in miniature? Or does she have only a rag doll or toy-on-wheels, that pulls by a string? A brand-new chapter of challenging (and interestingly varied) activity, matter-of-factly introduced and suavely supervised by you, might wean her overnight from her pebble swallowing.

As for her dawdling demands to be fed at meals,—you already know the cure for that. To get the desired results, you need only apply what you know, in a bland spirit of dauntless persistence. To be specific: Make a rule to allow her 40 minutes at table. She has reached an age to feed herself; and manages to do so, when appetite prompts. So give her to understand, casually and kindly, that she IS to feed herself; the alternative being to leave the table unfed. At the end of 40 minutes, her meal time is over. She is graciously dismissed from table and her place is cleared. If her portion is untouched or scarcely touched, you must seem amiably unconcerned. Does she howl for dessert? Your reaction should be: "Too bad. Supper is over. But there will be more nice custard tomorrow night." Even though she should deny herself food three times a day for several days in succession, trying to get her way, you must not surrender your genial indifference to her tactics.

If appetizing food in frugal amount is regularly set before her, with the simply worded reminder at the beginning of each meal that she is to "help herself," she will take what she needs when her system calls for it. Praise her when she feeds herself. Attach no importance to her refusal to do so. And DON'T inject emotional conflict into the situation, by ostracizing her at table or manifesting irritation or regret, if she rebels against feeding herself. The idea you are to get across to her is this: She has the privilege of eating, if she so desires; and you are taking for granted that she will eat, when she is hungry. But in the meantime, while she isn't hungry, life goes merrily on for all of you.

Bicycling has staged a comeback. Besides being a medium of travel, it is a great aid to health and beauty. That "long stemmed look" can be achieved for the torso by bicycle exercise. It's also a way to the peaches and cream type of complexion.

One parfumeur who is a barometer for the whims of women considers that bicycling has become such a part of life that he has created a perfume in its honor. "Woodhue" is the name given to this personification because its fragrance is reminiscent of leafy dells, rippling winds and the song of the little brown thrush. It is especially appropriate for bicycling because it suits both the mood and the clothes of the sport, and seems to belong to sweaters, culottes and summer tweeds.

This perfume is presented in a handsome streamlined flacon, topped with burl walnut. Cologne, dusting powder and bath oil, all matching, make up an attractive ensemble with this scent.

The "bike" has also given rise to a new deodorant cream. One cosmetic company has developed a cream which has been subjected to a "bike test." To determine the efficacy of deodorant creams, three creams were measured for underarm odor. The 20 college girls who gave the under-arm cream its test, pedaled bicycles for 20 minutes.

This cream, which came out with honors in the experiment, works several ways—stops underarm perspiration odor one to three days; stops under-arm perspiration itself one to three days; is a pure, soothing antiseptic, non-irritating to normal skin, is fragrant smelling; prevents clothes stains, clothes-rot due to perspiration; works fast invisibly; disappears from sight; is not greasy, nor sticky, requires no rinsing. How use? Dab on—dress—dash away!

Herbal Vinegars Add Zest to Many Dishes

TABBY, the cat we had when I was a child, used to scamper with delight when I brought her catnip. My Aunt Sally was delighted when I carried home sage from a forage, as she used it in stuffing and for making sage cheese. Such was my introduction to herbs—weeds to me.

Those "fragrant weeds" have always been a vivid memory. I didn't realize when gathering them that they and many other herbs could lift common dishes to new levels.

Herb growing interest has been revived. Mrs. Patricia Pound, wife of the celebrated mural painter, Ezra Pound, started growing herbs on her Juniper Hills, Connecticut farm, when she retired from a flourishing cosmetic business. It didn't take the herbs long to flourish into a new business for Mrs. Pound. Starting with a small herb garden, she now has her entire 400-acre estate under herb cultivation.

From her "House of Herbs" has resulted 105 varieties of herbs, which serve as a basis for delectable herb vinegars, sauces and seasonings. Herb vinegars in seven piquant flavors, all highly concentrated, full-bodied, and ruby-hued have been achieved to give extraordinary flavor to meats, fish, vegetables, sauces, soups, salads and hors d'oeuvre. From her products you may make a choice of Mixed Herbs, Basil, Savory, Herb Salad, Mint, Tarragon or Garlic vinegars.

Accent seasonings, which are blended herb bouquets, are also produced on this herb farm. Seasonings for meats, sauces and stews, for poultry, stuffings, vegetables and soup, and a brisk sharp variety for eggs, fish and cheese. An herb flavored mustard sauce made on a base of chicken soup and sherry and pungent with herbs to be used "as is" on cold meats, dashed into salad dressings, canapes, soups, teas or vegetables to achieve that "chef's touch" is also available.

If you want to serve a distinctive salad for your next buffet party, try the following recipe for Swedish salmon salad, and serve with French dressing made with house of herbs tarragon vinegar.

Swedish Salmon Salad

Make this salad so that it may blend the flavors for at least two hours ahead of time in the refrigerator. Remove bones from one pound can salmon, toss it with one and one-half cups diced carrots, one-half cup green beans, one-half cup peas, one-half cup minced green pepper, one cup sliced ripe olives and one-third of an onion, minced, plus the salad dressing, until well moistened but not dripping with an oversupply of dressing. Let ripen for at least two hours in refrigerator. Arrange on bed of lettuce or chicory and mask, if you like, with thin mayonnaise. Decorate with tomato slices, and wedges of calavos.

French Dressing—Beat together vigorously, 11 tablespoons oil, three tablespoons herb vinegar, one teaspoon garlic vinegar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and one-eighth teaspoon sugar.

Summer Mysteries

DO YOU KNOW WHY?

Women downtown in slacks usually wear such deadpan faces?

Those with bony ankles and feet in which the veins show stuff them, sans hosiery, into high heeled pumps?

Those wearing leg film have a penchant for getting it on in streaks

Large ladies have such an affinity for broad stripes running the wrong way, nondescript ones for speckled fabrics?

Men insist on wearing white shoes when they can't keep them clean ten minutes after they put them on? (The same goes for light suits).

The girls who roll their hose invariably have dresses that hike up in the back?

Women who spend weeks hunting dresses to conceal their figure faults will buy in 10 minutes bathing suits that show everything at its worst?

No woman can enjoy the Fourth of July in any peace of mind unless she has gotten her fall and winter wardrobe pretty well planned out and knows where the money is coming from.

The Whipping Boy

"I hear Eloise Whiffle is in uniform."

"Yes, she was bound to do something like that."

"What do you mean?"

"On account of her inferiority complex."

"And I understand her sister Lucille is going down on the farm."

"Yes, Lucille's always wanted to get away from people. You know she has this terrific sense of inferiority."

"Well, of course, she's inherited that. Look at Mrs. Whiffle—with her collection of quill toothpicks."

"And then look at her father. He could never have made all that money if he hadn't been driven by inferiority."

"It seems odd that the son hasn't done anything in the world."

"He'll never do anything. He has no self-assurance whatever."

"Well, I suppose he never got over being jilted by Adele Skipper. By the way, I heard she's married Bob Hercules, the wrestler. I can't understand it."

"She just wanted to prove she could marry a man like that. Adele really has an inferiority complex about men."

"And isn't it too bad about her sister Adelaide's going to Reno. I thought she and Horace were so happy."

"Well, of course, so many of Adele's friends were getting divorced and I suppose she wanted to show she could be, too. You know at heart Adele really suffers from inferiority."

Secretaries Told How to Keep Jobs

By Wide World Features

Out in Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., they have just made a survey on why secretaries lose their jobs. Here are the resulting ten commandments recommended as secretarial job insurance:

1. Don't powder your nose on the boss' time.
2. Don't watch the clock.
3. Be punctual.
4. Be loyal. Treat your employer's business as confidential.
5. Keep cheerful. Your boss isn't interested in your broken heart.
6. Be neat, attractive and well-groomed.
7. Avoid office cliques and politics.
8. Don't ask too many questions. Keep alert and you'll catch on to office routine.
9. Be accurate.
10. Learn to accept responsibility.

William Culbertsons Are Weekend Hosts; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch Entertain

By Patricia Grady

Little grains of rubber,
Little drops of gas,
Saved by walking weekdays
Make treks on Sunday come to pass

—might well be the social wartime motto for Washingtonians if the rush to parties in the country yesterday is any criterion.

Entertaining at their first house party of this summer in their 68-mile-from Washington home at Charmian, Pa., were Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson who numbered a group of Capitalites among their guests. Also out-of-town hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, who invited several dozen friends to their country residence near Burke, Va., to a "come as you are" party.

The Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban were among those in the gasoline saving caravan that spent the weekend with the Culbertsons, who have been in their Pennsylvania headquarters since the first of the month. Swimming, riding and generally "lazing around" were on the informal two-day program at Charmian. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Horatio C. Gillmor were in the gathering, as were Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. Perry Heath and Miss Esther Boyer.

Regular Charmian weekenders are Miss Jane Culbertson, the daughter of the household, who spends most of her time in Washington working in her father's law offices and keeping up with her war relief activities, and Thomas Luckenvill, the Culbertsons' son-in-law, Mrs. Luckenvill and their young child are spending the summer at Charmian while Mr. Luckenville does some special work here.

Until their return to their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue about October 1, almost every weekend will see a number of Washingtonians enjoying a few days of country rest and fresh air at the Culbertson estate.

'Carte Blanche' Given Guests

"I didn't believe there were parties like this," enthused one of the Douglas Hatches' guests yesterday as she was given her choice of climbing out of her sports clothes into a bathing suit and taking a swim in the nearby lake; of strolling through the gardens with or without a mint julep from the generous bar; of sitting under the trees and chatting with anyone who felt like sitting and chatting; of gathering around the piano, where Louis Brown played anyone and everyone's' favorite tune; of having carte blanche to entertain herself as she liked in the completely informal atmosphere of the Hatches' country home.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, who is taking a momentary rest from receiving honorary degrees from the Nation's universities, was at his witty best in the casual gathering. He shared attention with the Military Attache of the Chinese Embassy, Maj. Gen. Chu Shih-ming, and Mme. Chu. The Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold were there from their McLean (Va.) home, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Pelley, Col. Alfred McCormack and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse were also in the group.

Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis—she was telling everyone about her new grandchild—were there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Brooks, she in a stunning red suit; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurd and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ingebretsen.

Other Parties On Datebook

The buffet supper came in for its full share of the attention with a number of hardy guests taking a swim in the lake during the late evening hours. Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran were there as were Countess Cassini, Emil Hurja, accompanied by Mrs. Hurja, who wore a perky green bow in her hair, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Robert Sherrod, and a number of others.

Other parties on the Washington datebook yesterday included the "drop around after 5:30" event at which Mrs. Eugene Villaret was hostess in the garden of her home on Springland Lane and the surprise goodby party given by Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ewen and Mrs. Winnie Allison in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Tallman W. Peel. Mr. and Mrs. Peel have sold their home in Sligo Park Hills to go to their recently purchased farm in Barre, Vt. They will leave this week for New England. About 50 of their friends were in the "after 6 o'clock" gathering.

Miss Hempstone To Make Bow

Things seem to be picking up for the debutante season with Miss Eleanor Noyes Hempstone's name being added to the ranks of those who will bow this year.

Miss Hempstone, who is the daughter of Capt. Smith Hempstone, U. S. N., and Mrs. Hempstone, will make her curtsey at a garden party on Saturday afternoon in the new home of her parents, White Chimneys, in Bethesda, Md. The deb-to-be was graduated this month from Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn.

The Hempstones moved to Washington recently from Annapolis, Md., where Capt. Hempstone has been stationed.

United Nations Club Has First Luncheon Meeting

Dinner guests at the patrons' table yesterday at the first meeting of the United Nations' Club in their new headquarters at Dumbarton Oaks, included the British Ambassador and Viscountes Halifax, the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Atherton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, John Thatcher and Mrs. Benjamin Rogers.

The United Nations' Club, which having had six extremely successful get-togethers at Hotel 2400, has just been granted the use of Dumbarton Oaks for use on Sundays as a temporary clubhouse.

This club, formed for the purpose of bringing together all of those interested in the United Nations' cause, with emphasis on the younger group, is looking forward in the fall to obtaining a permanent clubhouse, to which will be invited for membership all those interested in the cause, personnel of embassies, legations and United States missions, younger members of the State, War and Navy Departments, personnel of the office of the Coordinator of Information, Office of Facts and Figures, Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and young officers temporarily stationed in Washington.

Honorary chairman of the club is Mrs. Robert Wood Bliss. While the executive committee is composed of such well known names as Mrs. Hoyer Millar, Lady Rumbold, Mrs. Blake-Taylor, Mrs. Robert Pell, Mrs. Frank R. Kent, jr., Miss Suzanne Rosenberg and Miss Meredith Howard.

Navy Officers Plan For Benefit Dance

A group of Washingtonians are busy making plans for the first formal ball to be given by the Junior Naval Officers. The fete, which will take place at the Sulgrave Club, July 4, will be for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society.

The patrons of the summer ball are Admiral and Mrs. Ernest J. King, Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, Rear Admiral and Mrs. James O. Richardson, Admiral and Mrs. Gilbert J. Rowcliff, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Randall Jacobs, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert Griffin, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Theodore S. Wilkinson, and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett.

Miss Altman Is Wed to Mr. Glassman

The marriage of Miss Ellen Altman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Altman, to Lawrence Glassman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Glassman of Boston, Mass., took place yesterday at 12 noon at the Hotel 2400. The Rev. Aaron Volkman officiated before an improvised altar banked with flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and net. Her finger-tip veil fell from a lace halo and she carried a white prayer book covered with white orchids.

The bride was atentded by her sister, Miss Zalma Altman, who wore a frock of yellow marquisette and a yellow halo veiled in orchid. She carried an orchid bouquet. Cyril Glassman served as best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, after which the couple left on their wedding trip. The bride was attired in a green suit with matching hat.

The bride was graduated from Wilson Teachers College and the bridegroom is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the George Washington University Law School.

June Olinger Is Betrothed To Lieut. Gibbs

Mrs. Herman F. Olinger of 15 Park Avenue, New York City, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss June Pauline Olinger, to Lieut. Charles V. Gibbs, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Gibbs of Washington, D. C.

Miss Olinger, daughter of the late Herman F. Olinger, was born in Zurich, Switzerland, and was educated in Zurich and Lausanne.

Lieutenant Gibbs was graduated from Michigan State College and is a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity, Scabbard and Blade, Varsity Club, Blue Key and Sigma Gamma Upsilon.

The wedding will take place on July 9 at St. Batholomew's Church in New York City. The couple will make their home on Gibson Island, Md., for the summer.

Officials to Attend Russian Festival

Most of official Washington will be on hand for the Russian Watergate Festival tomorrow night.

Among the boxholders for the benefit event are Mrs. Henry Wallace, the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax, the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff, Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, Mme. Miss Strickler Is Wed at FoundryChurch

The Foundry Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock of Miss Mary Lucille Strickler and Frederick William Dierkoph. The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vass Edward Strickler of Warrenton, Va., and her husband is the son of Mrs. Frank M. Dierkoph and the late Mr. Dierkoph of Washington.

The bride wore a gown of white marquisette and lace made with a fitted bodice and a sweetheart neckline. Her finger-tip veil of bridal illusion was held by a coronet of pearl and orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses. Her only ornament was a string of pearls.

Mrs. Eugne M. Smith of Arlington, Va., was matron of honor for her sister and Mrs. Vernon Parks served as bridesmaid. Their dresses were of marquisette and lace, made like that of the bride. Mrs. Smith wore orchid and Mrs. Parks wore pale pink. Both carried bouquets of mixed flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Robert W. Greenwood was the best man and the ushers were Elmer Downs, Hanford P. Miller and Norman N. Stenz.

Miss Schroder Is Married

With Virginia Beach as their destination, Ensign and Mrs. John Stephen Howell are on a wedding trip through Virginia and upon their return will make their home in Silver Soring, Md. She is the former Miss Helen Elizabeth Schroder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Earl Schroder of Long Beach, Calif., and had been staying at the Shoreham since her arrival here with her mother a short time ago.

Ensign Howell is the son of Mrs. George Alfred Howell and the late Mr. Howell of Merced, Calif. Their marriage took place at 3:30 on Saturday at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament with the Rev. Charles Gorman officiating. The bride was attired in a white ensemble trimmed with chantilly lace, a small white straw hat with a long veil and she carried a prayer book and white orchids. The couple were attended by Mrs. Henry Squire Reid, jr., of New York, and Ensign Charles Berry of Oklahoma City, Okla.

A reception followed at the Dorchester House apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wakefield. The bride's mother received guests wearing a dove gray gown with small flowered hat and orchid corsage and Mrs. Howell was gowned in pale green with matching accessories and an orchid.

WAAF to Be Bride Of Canadian Pilot

Mrs. Alexander Hall of Fetcham Surrey, England, announces the engagement of her daughter, Section Officer Joan M. I. Hibberdine, W. A. A. F., to Flight Lieut. D. C. S. MacDonald, Royal Canadian Air Force.

The wedding will take place Sunday, July 12, at 5 o'clock at St. John's Church. Air Commodore E. B. C. Betts, D. S. C., D. F. C., will give the bride in marriage. A service wedding, there will be no attendants.

Pro Arte Quartet to Give Second in Concert Series

When the Pro Arte String Quartet returns to Meridian Hill Park tonight for its second concert in the starlight chamber music series, it will have to mind its sharps and flats as never before. In the audience will be some 50 members of the Washington Music Teachers Association.

Miss Waldman Is Married In Afternoon Rites

The marriage of Miss Sylvia Rita Waldman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Waldman of Hyattsville, Md. to Lieut. Jerome Gerald Sacks, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Sacks of Baltimore, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Crystal Room of the Willard Hotel. The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of fern and white gladioli by the Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld. A reception for the 150 guests followed.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white organdie, trimmed with ruffles of b'roderie anglaise, and made with tight bodice, puffed sleeves and a full skirt terminating in a short train. Her finger-tip veil was fashioned of illusion net and she carried a white bible with white orchids. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Gloria Waldman, who wore a frock of chartreuse jersey and net and carried an arm bouquet of deep blue delphinium.

Seymour Sacks of Baltimore served as best man for his brother.

Both Lieutenant Sacks and his bride are graduates of Maryland University. In addition, Lieutenant Sacks received his master's degree and Ph.D. at the Catholic University of America.

After a brif wedding trip, they will reside in Washington.

Barbara Mace Becomes Bride Of H. W. McGinniss

Upon their return from a wedding trip Ensign Harry Wilkeson McGinniss 3d, U. S. N. R. and the former Miss Barbara Martin Mace will make their home in Washington, where the bridegroom is stationed for the time being.

They were united in marriage on Saturday at 4:30 at St. Alban's Church by the Rev. Charles E. Warren. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brice Martin Mace of Washington and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. McGinniss of Kensington, Md.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore ivory satin trimmed with Aleneon lace and a full length veil held with a juliet cap of seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried an heirloom handkerchief and a bouquet of white orchids and larkspur.

The maid of honor was Miss Belle McGinniss, sister of the bridegroom who wore a costume of white marquisette made with ruffled apron and carried a colonial bouquet of yellow roses and blue delphinium matching her headdress which was held with a yellow tulle veil. The bridesmaid was Miss Jane Hurd of Detroit, classmate of the bride at Mount Holyoke College. She was attired in a similar white marquisette frock and a blue veil. Ensign Charles E. Channing jr., U. S. N. R. was the best man and ushering were Ensign James Sargent of Chicago, Ensign John Wilson Brown jr. of Washington, both of the Naval Reserve and Gerald Warthen of Kensington.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Kennedy-Warren. The bride attended the Monticello School in California. Ashley Hall in Charleston, S. C., was graduated from the Chevy Chase Junior College and is now a student at Mount Holyoke. Ensign McGinniss is a graduate of the University of Maryland, where he was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Stokes–Kelley Rite Are Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stokes announce the marriage of their daughter, Bernice Lillian, to Sergt. William R. Kelley, U. S. M. C.

The marriage took place at 3 o'clock on Saturday in the parsonage of the Augustana Swedish Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Kelley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stokes of St. Paul, Minn. She attended school in St. Paul and is now employed in the Federal Power Commission. Sergeant Kelley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Kelley of Millbridge, Me., and is now stationed at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

"Mission to Moscow" Is Acquired by the Warners

Former Ambassador Davies Makes a Statement; Paul Robeson to Sing at the Watergate; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

LAST WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, in the office of the Hon. Joseph E. Davies, former United States Ambassador to the U. S. S. R., contracts were signed by Mr. Davies and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, whereby that studio was granted exclusive rights to produce a motion picture based on the former Ambassador's celebrated book, "Mission to Moscow."

GARY COOPER

Concerning the transaction involving the filming of the work recently serialized in its more important aspects in The Washington Post, Mr. Davies had this, in part, to say:

"Because of this company's outstanding record of public service to the consciousness of the American people by making such vital pictures as Ambassador Gerard's 'My Four Years in Germany,' 'Sergeant York,' 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy,' 'Yankee Doodle Dandy' and numerous other films of their type, I believe Warner Brothers will give to 'Mission to Moscow' the same honest, plain-talking treatment which I have attempted to give the urgent subject in my book.

"In granting the film rights of my book to Warner Brothers, I am also making available for the first time my personal diaries, memoranda and other private information which was not included in the volume. This I do because of the strong conviction that a complete and frank portrayal of conditions contributing to a better mutual understanding and confidence between two great peoples at this particular time may be of paramount service to the cause of the United Nations and to free men everywhere."

Mr. Davies' mention of Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" recalls the occasion of its Washington premiere, when Tom Moore broke out all the flags and all the showmanship he had at his command. The Rialto Theater—now leveled off into a midcity parking lot—was still in course of construction, so an official, invitational preview was staged in the Central High School Auditorium, which bulged with practically all of the bigwigs and brass-hats of the First World War. Immediately thereafter the picture took up its regular public run as a "road show" attraction in the old Poli's Theater, which stood at Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue on part of the site now occupied by Mr. Mellett's "madhouse." Having an unimportant finger in the proceedings, we then met the Warners—Harry M., Albert and Jack L.—for the first time, en masse. The firm name at that point conveyed little beyond the genealogical fact of common parenthood. The boys have come along a bit since that spring of 1918. Let's see, 8 from 13 leaves four, 1 from 3—24 years ago! Amazing that I can remember it!

More for the Cause of Russia

Paul Robeson, foremost baritone of his race, is the latest star to be added to the Russian War Relief program to be given at the Watergate tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Robeson, who has made frequent visits to Russia, will include many Russian numbers he has made popular in this country in his repertory tomorrow night. He also will accede to the requests of many Washington admirers by singing favorite spirituals, folk songs and work songs, gathered from many lands. In addition to the famous actor-singer, the program will include contributions by the 50-piece Balalaika Orchestra, of Philadelphia; "Song for American Union," by Harold J. Rome, with the Columbia Light Opera Company, and Leon Askin's Players in dramatic offerings. Melvyn Douglas will act as narrator of the chanted poem.

And somewhere back there, Mr. Davies also mentioned "Sergeant York." When the Gary Cooper Academy Award winner opens on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater on Friday, it will be making its third visit to the National Capital and playing its seventh week in the downtown area. The box-office records it already has achieved place it up there with "The Birth of a Nation," "The Jazz Singer" and "Gone With the Wind" as one of the greatest popular successes ever produced. It comes into the Met. under the regular house policy of continuous performances and popular prices.

Speaking of box-office popularity, the six "Box-Office Champions" for the month of May, as determined by bona fide audits of moola on the barrelhead, were "My Gal Sal," "Reap the Wild Wind," "Mister V.", "In This Our Life," "My Favorite Blonde"—only now on the screen at the Earle—and "Kings Row." Two for Warner Brothers, two for Paramount and one each for Twentieth Century-Fox and United Artists. We said at the time that "Mister V.", Leslie Howard's modernized "Scarlet Pimpernel," was a pretty good number, but too many people seemed to think we were kidding.

A Few Dots and Fewer Dashes

This morning at 10:30, by the wrist or the vest pocket, they are previewing "The Man Who Seeks the Truth," at the Little Theater . . . Said to be one of Raimu's best, which, in the light of "The Baker's Wife," is plenty good . . . Opens Wednesday morning for the cash customers . . . Tryouts for parts in "Stage Door," by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman, are being held by the Players Club of the D. C. Recreation Department tonight, Wednesday and Friday nights in Room 101, Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest, at 8 o'clock . . . Director J. S. Cunningham plans three performances for early September—two rehearsals a week, for the time being . . . "This Above All," filmed from Eric Knight's book, with Tyrone Power, Joan Fontaine and Thomas Mitchell heading the cast, will be coming along to Loew's Palace toward the end of next month.

HEDDA HOPPER

Three Little Maids

Hollywood, Calif., June 28. While watching Paulette Goddard, Dorothy Lamour, and Veronica Lake rehearse their number, "A Sweater, Sarong, and Peek-a-Boo Bob," for "Star Spangled Rhythm," I not only got an eyeful, but learned more about the girls. There was Paulette in white shorts, practically getting a hump on her back from her new jewelry—a huge slave bracelet, solidly encrusted with diamonds and containing a tiny watch; huge earrings to match, and two new diamond rings.

PAULETTE GODDARD

One of the diamond rings was small, and she said, "That's for sentiment"—with a gleam in her eye that made me speculate as to its giver. Then I glanced from her jewels to Veronica's engagement ring, and the diamond in that was smaller than any chip on Paulette's. But instead of jewelry, Veronica's got a husband and baby.

The number is a satire on the girls careers—how Paulette became famous through a sweater, Lamour a sarong, and Lake a peek-a-boo bob. Paulette had already learned the lyrics and was acting every second. Dottie had the words in front of her, and Lake, the laziest girl in town, just sat on a high stool, without extending an ounce of effort, and sang in a whisper.

In back of them, completing the number, were Arthur Treacher, Walter Catlett, and Sterling Holloway. Arthur said, "I started as a chorus boy 24 years ago, so I'm back where I started." Catlett began his career as Koko in "The Mikado," and Holloway in "The Garrick Gayeties." Of course, we all know how the girls started their careers.

Remember the story about the guy who wanted to see the baseball game and gave as an excuse his grandmother's death? Well, a couple of our younger prominent stars who live in the Valley revived their grandmothers when they didn't want to entertain our weekly visitor from the Phoenix flying school.

The Dean Jaggers, who have made these trips possible, took the boy over, and the first place they stopped was the Grace Hayes lodge. And there sat the guilty pair, having the time of their lives—without grandma.

He was kidding Bing Crosby and saying, "Yep—Bing's building up to an early retirement. He's got his son Gary singing for him. His horse is pulling the wagon that carries our film, and Dixie's sewing on beads in the wardrobe. Now all he has to do is go out to Lakeside Golf Club and retire until September."

Diana Barrymore is on the spot. With the great tradition of her family, she can't behave like any other young star out for a fling. The death of Jack has focused the eyes of millions on her.

Talked with her yesterday on set of "Love and Kisses, Caroline." She's likeable, but has plenty to learn, and should stop playing around both on the set and in private life, which leads to those rumors floating around.

No matter what Jack did, he treated the press as friends, and she'd better change her tune—and quickly.

Private Burgess Meredith will appear in a Government-sponsored movie with Gen. Arnold. He was selected because the role is that of an Air Corps private, and Meredith not only is a good actor but also the best-known private in the corps . . . Now a technical problem has arisen. Because of his efficient work, he's in line for promotion. But if he's promoted he won't be able to appear in the movie. The Army officials will try to solve it by postponing notification of that promotion until the movie has been completed.

A movement was started last week among writers, editors and publishers to have Elmer Davis, the new Director of War Information, return to the radio. The proposed plan is to have Davis broadcast a report to the Nation once a week . . . This will have to await the President's approval. Mr. Roosevelt feels that he already accomplished one good trick in getting Davis to accept his present job. "Elmer," said the President, "was a hard fish to get to bite."

At the dinner in honor of Amy Loveman, of the Saturday Review of Literature, the publisher of that magazine, Harrison Smith, was worried lest he be called upon to make a speech. "What would you say if they call upon you?" he was asked . . . Smith replied that he would tell them the story of Nero and the Lion: A martyr, whose innocence was to be decided by his ability to emerge, alive, from the arena where a lion awaited him, walked up to the hungry lion and whispered something into his ear. The lion fled and Nero therefore spared the martyr's life . . . "I'm curious," Nero confessed. "What did you tell the lion to make him go away?" . . . "I just said to him," explained the martyr, "'After dinner you'll be expected to make a few remarks.'"

"I'd like to, but I can't," said Kanin . . . "But didn't you like 'Mrs. Miniver?'" asked the publicist. "Surely you can make a list of 10" . . . "I'd like to do it," replied the youthful Kanin, "but how can I pick the 10 greatest pictures I've ever seen—when I've only made seven?"

Film Starlet Hopes For Opera Career

Although Kathryn Grayson has just signed a new long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, she has no idea of giving up her operatic ambitions. Kathryn, it will be remembered, was the girl who actually had to be persuaded to sign her first motion picture contract. She preferred opera.

Though she is now a success in films she still studies for opera and has a repertory of six. She devotes her lunch hour to arias and takes a lesson every evening after she has finished work on "Seven Sisters."

"I figure I still have time for opera," she says. "As soon as this contract is completed I am going to try to win a Metropolitan audition."

Trans-Lux

For a line on the merits of this week's Trans-Lux show, note these news headings: The Libya Front on the Eve of a Great Battle; views of the Island of Malta, as bombings of this stronghold approach the three thousand mark; the shelling of the West Coast by an enemy submarine; the first pictures of the Battle of Midway—the great conflict before your very eyes; the third and biggest contingent of Yankee troops reach Ireland in safety; King Peter of Yugoslavia calls on the President; King George of Greece visits West Point; Dutch Queen Wilhelmina arrives in America; Ben Hogan wins the Hale America golf tourney over Bobby Jones and other stars. These are the highlights of 35 pictured subjects, all of which are timely and absorbingly interesting.

Then there is March of Time's masterful episode, "India at War," which shows surprising war preparation, and equally surprising numbers of East Indians already shouldering an important share on all war fronts. This is the final episode of the two-issue coverage of India.

Editor H. V. Kaltenborn assures that Russia will continue to fight with the United Nations after victory over the Nazis, informs on the number of neutral countries and why they are neutral, and explains what would happen if the Japs gained a foothold on the West Coast. War Correspondent Tex McCrary argues dramatically for an independent air force.

Finally, Walt Disney presents the favorite "Goofy" in a demonstration of the "Art of Self Defense" over the ages. This is the Disney art at its best; comedy rich and lasting—rare subtlety combined with mild boisterousness.

What is Morale?

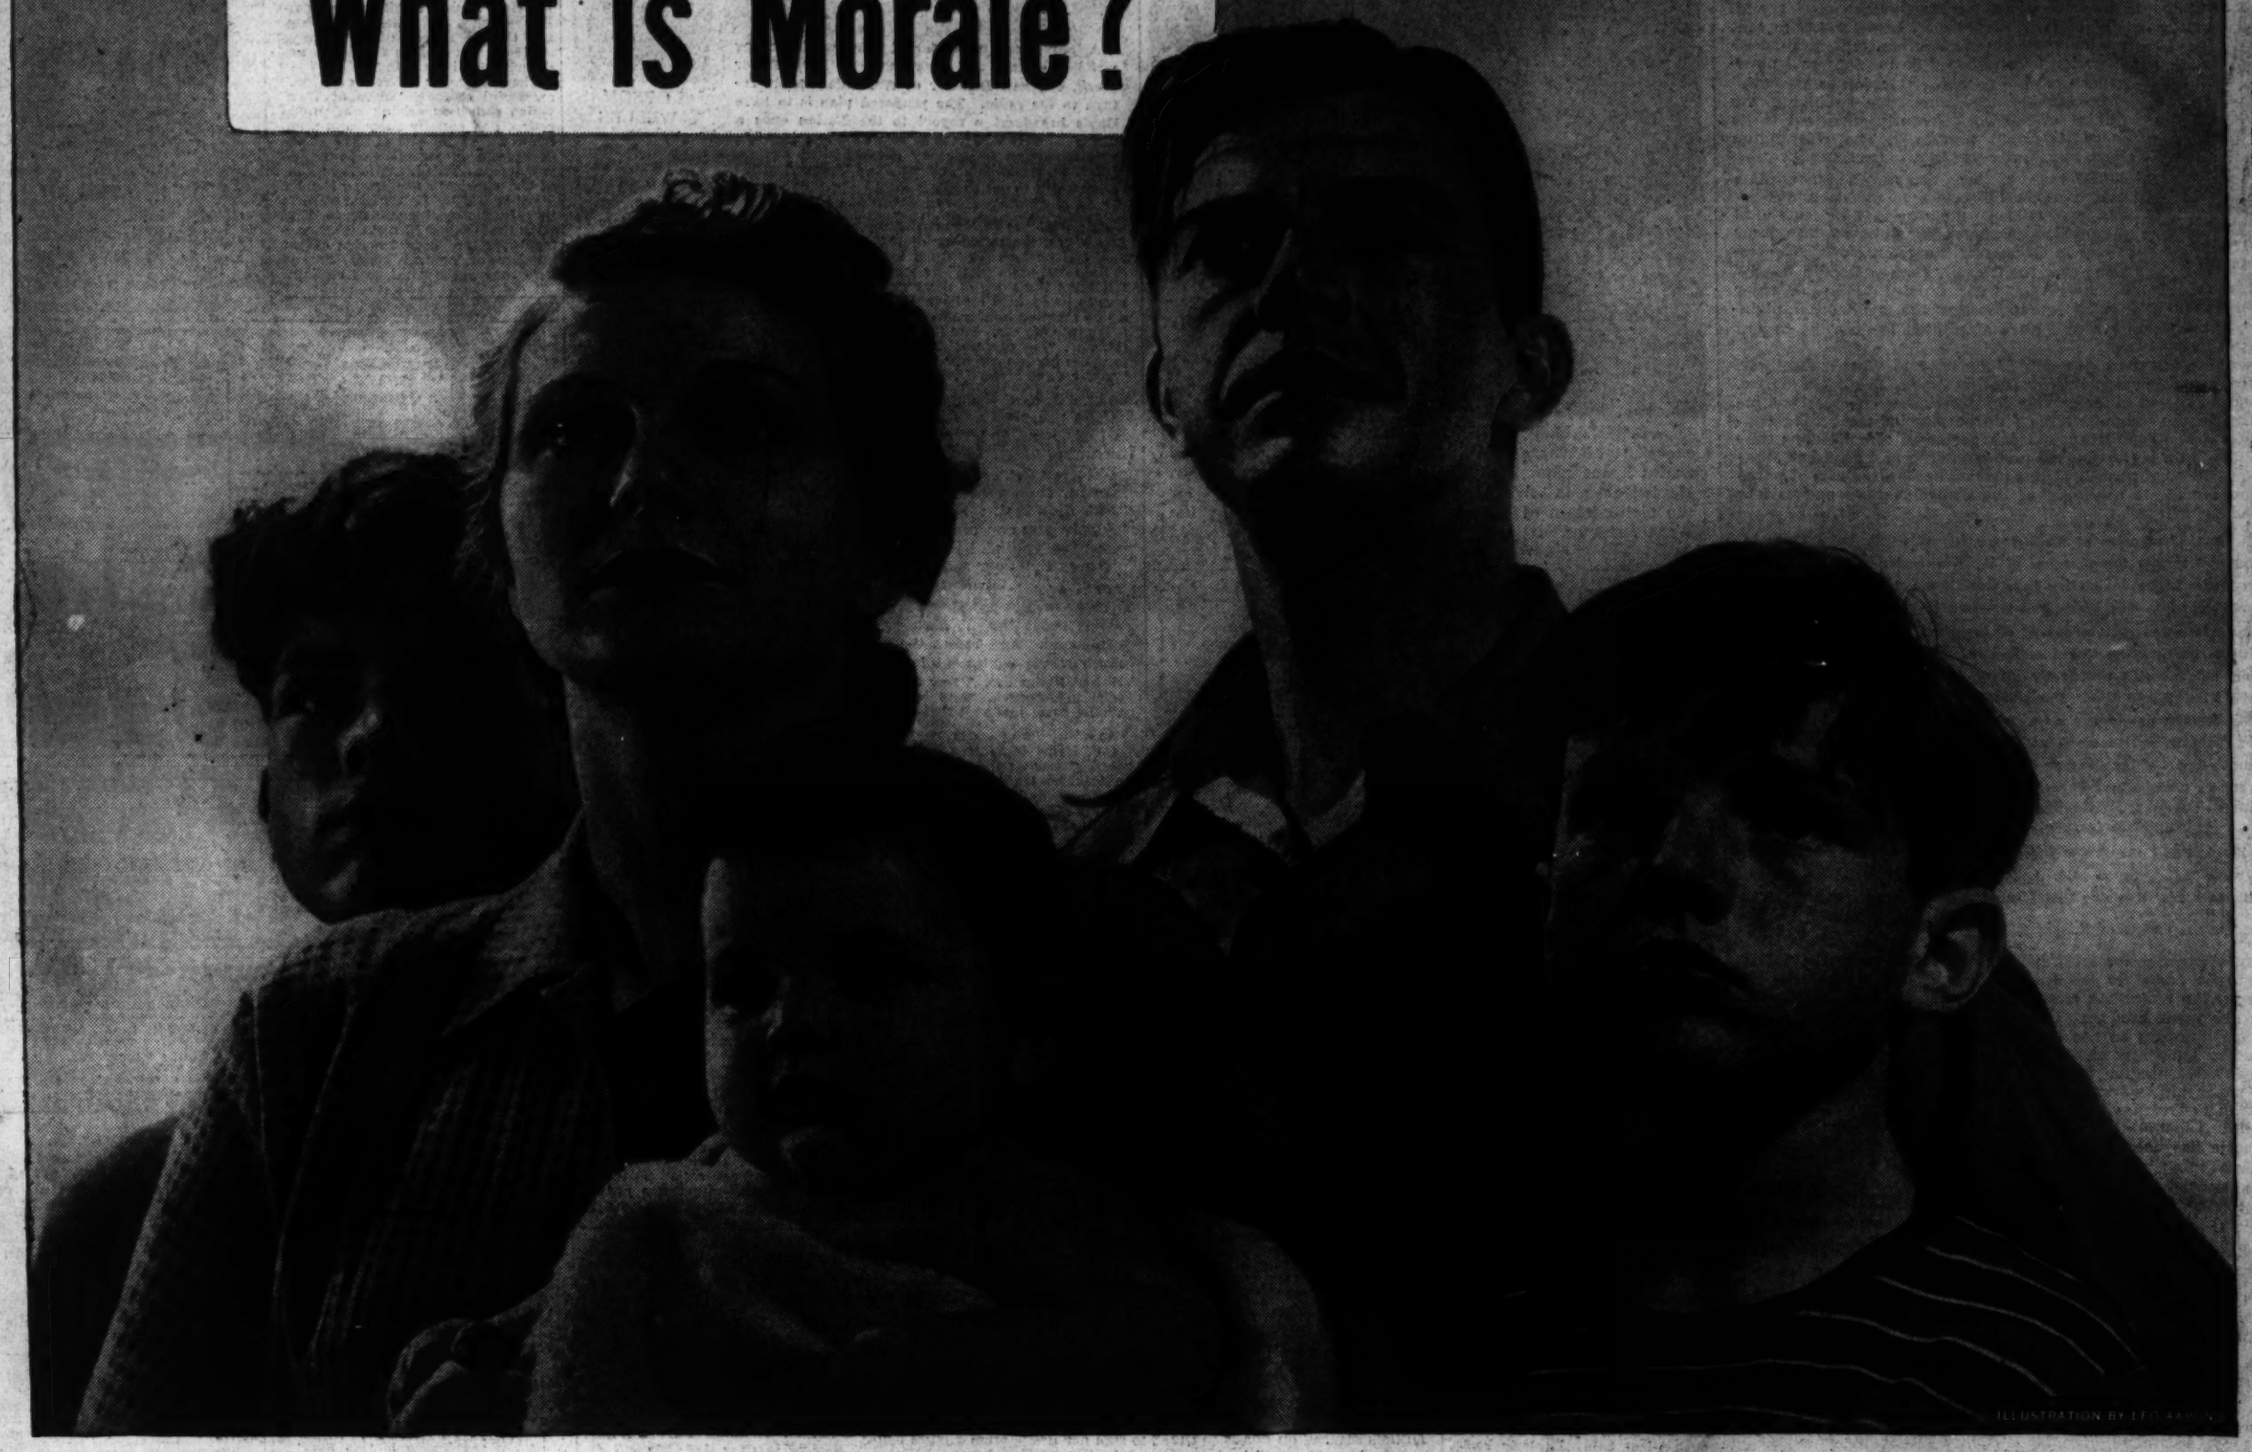

ILLUSTRATION BY LEO AMINO

The endurance . . . initiative . . . power of sacrifice . . . loyalty . . . ability to subordinate personal interest and pride . . . the power of taking the measure of the event, and discounting the unfavorable turn . . . of responding to frightfulness with redoubled resolution . . . of appreciating the real emergency . . . these qualities of mind and character, in the ensemble, go by the name of "morale"; these qualities hold the balance of power in war . . .
THE FOUNDATION OF MORALE IS KNOWLEDGE AND BELIEF . . . by William Ernest Hocking

Can a family-read picture magazine help win the war?

. . . If morale counts for anything . . . Yes, it can!

Therefore, we—the men and women who publish LOOK, believe that its wartime function is to:

1 Interpret the government to the people.

2 Serve as the voice of the people in constructively criticizing the government.

3 Interpret the free enterprise system to the people.

4 Keep before the people the things we are fighting for:

a. liberty. b. equality of opportunity. c. justice.

5 Show the people how they can help.

6 Help the people measure and evaluate progress of the war effort—help them avoid unsound optimism, useless fright.

7 Direct their hours of recreation to allow some escape from the harsh realities of the day.

8 Prepare the people to shoulder their burden in the peaceful world of tomorrow.

This war is the people's war—an all-out war. Every member of every family can play a vital part. Therefore LOOK is striving to give its 2,000,000 families greater knowledge and greater faith—to help them win the war.

Payless Paydays Face New War Agencies

It's now widely believed that Congress won't approve appropriations for the new war agencies in time to meet the July 15 payday. And those agencies include among others OPA, WPB, Office of Censorship, Office of War Information, Office of Emergency Management, the Rockefeller Agency, Office of War Transportation. OEM will have enough funds left over from the 1942 fiscal year to meet the major part of the payroll. It's highly probable that the remaining funds will be taken from the President's special fund . . . Commerce, War, Navy, WPB, Civil Service and many more have been ordered to work as usual on July 4. Treasury and Agriculture will have a holiday and Justice, OEM among others will work skeleton staffs.

Internal Revenue has volunteered to move approximately 300 of its employes out of Washington. Meantime, it's giving up its space in the U Street Building and the Raleigh Hotel. Units to be moved are the tobacco section, office of the technical staff, the sub-section on information returns, the basic permit section of the Alcohol Tax Unit, and the legal staff of the Atlantic section of the technical division. The last two units named will be transferred to Baltimore. Space for the other divisions hasn't been leased but it'll be in nearby cities.

WPB hears that Douglas C. MacKeachie, formerly chief of the purchasing division and now a colonel in the Army, will handle the purchasing for the new AEF. He'll have headquarters in London . . . Senator Mead of New York promises speedy Senate action on the custodial pay raise bill. He has been appointed chairman of a subcommittee to handle the bill and he'll probably seek action in the Senate within a few days after the House acts, which is expected to be this week . . . Philip Reed, the WPB official who is being fired on by the Truman Committee, may be taken off the hot spot by being shipped to London to make another study.

Federal Housing's research division has been transferred to Jack Blandford's National Housing Agency, where it'll do research for all housing units . . . The more than 300 employes here of OEM's information service will be paid tomorrow. The division is legally abolished. It'll be officially transferred to the Office of War Information on July 1 . . . Francis H. Dryden will be appointed Commissioner of WPA. He gets on notably well with Congress for a WPA boss . . . Elizabeth Brandeis, daughter of the late famed Supreme Court justice, is being backed for a place on WPB's Small Business Corporation. So's Ted Granik of radio fame, and Pete Nehemkis of WPB.

Cochran Cuts Rail Costs

Representative Cochran of Missouri, should be saluted by the economy bloc. He has made an effective suggestion that'll save the taxpayers $223,000 annually on freight and express shipments. More than two years ago Cochran suggested to the Budget Bureau that a central agency be set up to control freight and express traffic. The Budget Bureau made a study, set up the bureau in the Procurement Division, and a saving of $223,000 has been realized. Budget Director Harold D. Smith gives Cochran full credit for the saving. He pointed out in a letter to Cochran that "The survey has brought about a major simplification and reduction in the traffic activities of the Government."

The Federal Public Housing information division will fold up tomorrow. Congress refused to appropriate for it. On the wall hangs this obituary:

"July marks the termination. Of FPHA Information.
Vacant rooms and silent phones.
Climax info's deathbed groans.

The Society for the Advancement of Management will hold a three-day meeting here in the fall on the conversion of Government to a war footing. The chairman will be J. M. Juran, assistant lend-lease administrator, who believes the war agencies could reduce their employes by 25 per cent if they could eliminate duplication

Taking No Chances

Camp Davis, N. C., June 28 (AP).—And why, his companions asked, should Pvt. Joe Mendel go swimming in the surf with his trousers on?

"Heck," Joe replied, "today was payday—and I wasn't leaving my money on any beach."

No Ration Worries

Rocky Mount, N. C., June 28 (AP).—The gasoline and rubber shortages are no worry to Edmund Stallings, a cripple here.

Stallings put shafts on his wheel chair, hitched up his Shepherd dog, Chief, and now says he gets "six miles to a pound of steak bones."

Rubber Pile Grows Over The Weekend

Drive Will End Here Tomorrow; Over 800,000 Pounds on Hand

With more than 800,000 pounds of scrap rubber already collected from local depots, Washington yesterday boosted this total considerably with contributions deposited at filling stations which remained open for that purpose.

J. P. McDonald, chairman for the metropolitan area of the Petroleum Industry War Council, said he did not believe yesterday's donations were as large as those contributed on any other single day of the President's rubber campaign, which began June 15 and is scheduled to end tomorrow at midnight, but he added that such rubber as did come in represented contributions which ordinarily might not have been received had the stations not remained open.

Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District Salvage Committee, said complete reports on yesterday's collections were unavailable.

Some Weren't Open

"Quite a few stations," he reported, "did not open up. But I believe the great majority of them did cooperate."

Commenting on reports that the President's campaign might be extended, Walker said that regardless of what is done nationally, the District's drive definitely will end Tuesday midnight.

He explained that the District Salvage Committee already had a plan for rubber collections when the President's drive was announced and merely "superimposed" this latter campaign on its own plans for the June 15-30 period. After July 1, he said, the District will continue to solicit rubber, pretty much on the same basis as at present, but nobody will be paid for their scrap.

Beginning today, Walker said, the charitable agencies which are collecting the scrap from all depots, exclusive of filling stations, will be instructed to pick up every piece of rubber at the depots. Heretofore the depots have retained a large part of their collections for display and psychological purposes, Walker said, but now it must all be brought in for purposes of checking.

This scrap rubber at the depots, he added, is not included in the report of total collections and should represent a material addition to the final report on the District campaign, which must be prepared not later than July 3.

Walker took occasion to denounce reports that scrap dealers were going to filling stations and buying from them choice pieces of rubber. On the contrary, he said many scrap dealers actually are selling their rubber to the stations at the fixed penny-a-pound price.

From the offices of the Petroleum Industry War Council, which discounted the reports, it was said that unless the scrap dealers manage to get hold of the rubber at the filling stations there's no other possible "in" for them in the President's campaign.

Little "Chiseling" Probable

And it was stated unofficially that out of approximately 400,000 filling stations participating in the campaign, it was doubtful whether there have been more than half a dozen isolated instances in which a filling station might have sold part of its contributions to the scrap dealers.

The reports of this practice came from Elliot E. Simpson, counsel of a House subcommittee investigating the rubber situation, who charged that the President's campaign "was a great financial boon to the scrap waste dealers," whom he accused of competing with Roosevelt's drive.

Simpson said the scrap dealers were hoarding rubber and that that their holdings represented "most of the large lots" in the country.

Simpson described as an independent rubber dealer of New York, issued his statement on a mimeographed sheet which indicated it came from the subcommittee, but it was not clear last night whether he was speaking as an individual or for the committee.

House Group Tackles Taxi Muddle Today

With congressional attitude strong for clarification of Washington's confused taxicab situation, a meeting of the House District Committee has been called for today by Chairman Jennings Randolph.

At the session, Public Utilities Commissioner Gregory Hankin will present to the committee a complete statement on the attitude of the commission, requested by Chairman Randolph, along with a report on the taxicab rate situation as a whole.

Protesting against the new rate schedule set up by the PUC, several thousand drivers went out on a 17-hour strike last Wednesday. Chairman Randolph called an emergency meeting of his group, effecting a temporary settlement at that time.

At the outset of Wednesday's meeting, Chairman Randolph promised spokesmen for both sides a complete hearing and at today's session sharp cross-examination of Hankin is expected. Committee members have pointed out there must be no tie-up in essential transportation.

One issue is whether the House committee will assume the study of the rate case and order new tariffs itself, or refer it back to the utilities body.

The new 30-50-70-90-cent schedule of zones, compiled and ordered into effect by the commission on June 15, has been confusing to both drivers and public. Drivers have said the new schedule is hard to understand, and instead, many have been charging the old 30-40-60-80-cent rate.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Harmonious Weather Heightens Pleasure of Sunset Symphony

Sir Ernest MacMillan conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the seventieth "Sunset Symphony Concert" at the Potomac Watergate on Sunday night. Soloists: Orrea Pernal and Benno Rabinov, violinists. Program: Overture to "The Barber of Seville" (Rossini), "Symphonie Miniature" (McKay), Concerto in D minor for two violins (Bach), Symphony No. 4 in A major (Mendelssohn), Petite Suite (Debussy), "Fruehlingsstimmen Walzer" (Strauss).

Having given Sir Ernest MacMillan a damp and disagreeable reception Saturday night when he made his first appearance of the summer as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, the local weather made amends for that discourtesy last evening by providing as pleasant an atmosphere as a Potomac Watergate audience has ever enjoyed. Temperature and humidity were comfortably adjusted, the air had a halcyon sauvity, and as darkness deepened the brighter stars peered through a delicate veil of cloud. It goes without saying that under these circumstances, the audience was restored to its usual dimensions of several thousand.

BROWN

Sir Ernest, whose conducting manner combines firmness with geniality, began his program with Rossini's overture to "Aurelian in Palmyra," alias the overture to "Queen Elizabeth of England," alias the overture to "The Barber of Seville." Anyone who has ever heard that last sprightly opera must have felt instinctively that the overture doesn't fit the comedy and wondered why. The original overture, based on popular Spanish tunes, was somehow lost, and Rossini, being naturally indolent when he was not composing feverishly, simply borrowed an overture which he had already used for two operas, and let it go at that.

The next item was the first local performance of a "Symphonie Miniature" by McKay, whom, in the absence of any identification on the program, I surmise to be George Frederick McKay of the University of Washington. The idiom is certainly American, and contemporary as well in the insistence upon a peppering of dissonance, while the titles of the three movements—"March to Tomorrow," "A Prairie Poem" and "Rondino on a Jovial Theme"—have an American tang. Mr. McKay writes well for orchestra with a deft use of color and economy in instrumentation, but his music sounds as though he dreaded to appear in the least conventional. Tunes which begin promisingly are left unfinished or are harmonically distorted, and one is continually disappointed by this practice.

Orrea Pernel and Benno Rabinov were the soloists in the Bach double violin concerto of which they gave a performance most satisfying in technical cleanness and fine tonal quality. Both played with the assurance of artistry and with a suffusion of vitality that made the ancient work glow. One noted with particular approval the consentient eloquence of both instruments in the slow movement.

The symphony chosen by Sir Ernest was Mendelssohn's "Italian," which he read with a full appreciation of its vivacity and with care for its song-like themes. There was evident too in his exposition of the work his recognition of Mendelssohn's fundamental characteristic of sincerity. After the symphony came Henri Buesser's transcription of Debussy's "Petite Suite" for piano four hands, and the program ended with the Johann Strauss waltz, "Spring Voices." The auditors asked for extra numbers, and received Berlioz' version of the "Rakoczi March," the "Valse Triste" of Sibelius, and a repetition of the Strauss waltz.

Priest Says First Solemn High Mass

With his two cousins assisting in the ceremonies, the Rev. James B. Horigan, S. J., native Washingtonian, yesterday celebrated his first solemn high mass since his ordination to the priesthood June 21.

He celebrated the mass in Dahlgren Chapel of Georgetown University, where his parents were married. His mother, Mrs. Josephine Clements Horigan, and other relatives attended the mass. His father was the late James B. Horigan.

Lieut. Frederick A. Gallagher, chaplain in the United States Navy, delivered the sermon, and the Rev. Joseph J. Bluett, S. J., was deacon. The Rev. William A. Horigan, S. J., assistant pastor of St. Aloysius' Church here, was archpriest, and the Rev. Gerald Horigan of the Woodstock College faculty was subdeacon. The latter two are cousins of the newly ordained priest.

Father Horigan attended Sacred Heart Academy and Gonzaga High School here, and entered the Society of Jesus at the age of 15, spending his noviceship at St. Andrew's-on-the-Hudson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

He studied at Woodstock (Md.) College from 1933 until his ordination to the priesthood there. During his student days he did graduate work at St. Louis (Mo.) University and taught at St. Joseph's Preparatory School, Philadelphia.

Negro Medical Unit Proposes Hospital Probe

Promising "appropriate disciplinary action" against any of its members who may have been involved in "the recent public allegations of dishonest and unethical practices" at Freedmen's Hospital, the board of governors of the Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District last night urged Administrator Paul V. McNutt of the Federal Security Agency to turn over to the society the names of doctors found guilty of such practices.

"We assure you that we shall not permit those whom we judge guilty of unethical conduct to enjoy the protection and support of our association," the board wrote, explaining that the society represented "the ethical Negro medical practitioners" of Washington.

"We insist that the best interests of the public health and our own interest will be served only by a full and free proof of those statements which appeared in the public press."

The statements referred to concerned McNutt's recent order that the hospital director and assistant director be removed, after the House Appropriations Committee reported evidences of "fee choking," "ambulance chasing" and a shortage of more than 200 quarts of whisky at the institution.

In writing to McNutt, the board of the Medico-Chirurgical Society reported that "members of our group have been active in the clinics, wards and other services of Freedmen's Hospital for years."

The board pledged its "continued interest in, and support of, the Freedmen's Hospital and of the principles for which it must stand if our people are to receive the highest benefit from it."

War Means Safe, Sane 4th for D. C.

Federal Employes Are Urged to Work On Holiday; Small Celebrations Allowed

The Nation's Capital is planning a safe Fourth of July out of a terrible necessity this year.

The anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the independence a war is being waged to retain, will fall on Saturday, and this city officially has put the clamps on any mass demonstrations that might invite sabotage or a token air raid.

With the old catch words "safe and sane" taking a broad, ominous meaning, the customary fireworks display at the Washington Monument won't be held under orders from the White House which acted upon advice from Secretary of War Stimson.

Smaller celebrations, to which great crowds would not be called up, were thought by the District Commissioners to be in order.

Beginning at 9 p. m. Saturday, the American Legion's national coordinating committee will broadcast over the Blue Network for an hour in programs originating in Atlanta, Chicago, New York and Boston. Large-scale patriotic shows will be produced in Soldier Field, Chicago, and on Boston Common.

The older safe and sane reminders were issued by the National Safety Council. "Don't use fireworks. Leave the shooting this year to the men in uniform," it was said. Persons with tires on their cars and gasoline in tanks were requested to cut down speed, thereby saving tires, cars and lives.

Warnings were issued against over exercise, swimming alone, over eating and too much exposure to the sun. Accidents help the Axis, the council reminded.

The outlook is for work on the Fourth for Government employes—under suggestion of War Production Chairman Donald M. Nelson, who reminded that soldiers on the battlefields take no such holidays.

Parents Believe Runaway Boy Is in Washington

The widely-reputed glamor of Washington seems to have entranced another one.

The frantic parents of Stanley Markowitz, 13, of 41 Walnut Avenue, Trenton, N. J., appealed to The Post yesterday to help them find the boy, believed to be in Washington.

STANLEY

Mrs. Markowitz wrote that Stanley disappeared from home last Tuesday and on Thursday sent his family a postcard from Washington. Nothing has been heard from him since, she said.

He was described as being 5 feet 3 inches tall, with brown hair, brown eyes, weight 120 pounds, and has a badly scarred right leg, a result of burns.

Leaving home, Stanley carried with him a suitcase and $24, it was said.

Your Daily Health Quiz

How Many Tons of Blood Does the Heart Pump Daily?

Although the average person has only 6 to 7 pints of blood normally, it circulates through the body so fast that the heart probably pumps 9 to 10 tons of blood daily!

Many people never realize that the blood stream must travel at this terrific speed in order to keep you alive. As you know, blood is made up of millions of tiny red blood cells. Each of these cells picks up a load of life-giving oxygen from the lungs—then rushes off to all parts of the body and releases its cargo to hungry living tissues. When the oxygen is burned up, the cells then carry off waste substance, called carbon dioxide, back through the lungs where it is eliminated.

When blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy. That is why some folks get over sickness and disease twice as fast as others . . . rarely feel tired . . . never complain . . . even cuts and bruises vanish like magic.

Now here's a tip. If your blood is thin, pale and watery . . . unable to supply rugged strength and vibrant energy . . . do something about it today. Get a bottle of Boncquet (pronounced Bon-Kay) Tablets. Devised by an eminent biochemist, Boncquet Tablets contain the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell manufacturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins D and C, and assimilable calcium and phosphorus. Your blood needs these essential raw materials that are generally deficient in the modern everyday diet.

Try Boncquet Tablets for 9 days, if you want to add new lighting blood. If you don't feel better, look better, have more strength and youthful energy, your money will be immediately refunded.

Bertha Gerstein, Noted Hebrew Monologist, Stars in Program for Russian War Relief

Bertha Gerstein, noted Hebrew monologist, replacing Joseph Bulov, prominent European actor, headlined an entertainment program last night in the auditorium of the National Press Club for the benefit of Russian War Relief.

Sponsored by the Washington Icor, organization of Crimean born Americans, the audience filled the large auditorium. Huge red, white and blue banners inscribed: "We Pledge Our Lives and Treasure in War for Freedom and Democracy" and "Jewish Brethren of U. S. S. R. Tonight We Will Respond to Your Call," were stretched at each end of the auditorium.

The program opened with the singing of the National Anthem, followed by Jewish hymns and folk songs by the Washington Jewish Folk Chorus, directed by Mendy Shain.

Miss Gerstein replaced the actor Bulov, who is a member of the cast in a current play on Broadway.

With the entertainment program over, speakers dwelt on the efforts of American Jews in sending relief to their brethren in the Soviet Union. Those who spoke included Dr. I. Borrisow, head of the local Icor organization; Rabbi Isadore Breslau head of the United Jewish Appeal; Col. Pavel Berezin of the Russian Embassy, and Benjamin Pollack.

Philip Murray, C. I. O. chief, is expected to speak at the Russian War Relief festival and concert tomorrow night at the Watergate in the drive to raise funds for medical supplies to be sent to the Eastern Front, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the local chapter of Russian War Relief.

Murray will speak of the attitude of labor toward assistance to Russia, both military and civilian, and will be followed by William L. Batt of the War Production Board, Maj. George Fielding Eliot, military analyst, and Lowell Thomas, radio commentator, it was announced.

The musical and dramatic features of the program include Russian songs and dances by Paul Robeson, Negro singer, and the 50-piece Balalaika Orchestra of Philadelphia, the Columbia Light Opera Company, conducted by Ethyl Manning, the Leon Akins Players and Melvyn Douglas, screen star, who will act as narrator for the chanted poem, "A Song for American Union," written by Harold J. Rome.

Russian War Relief, originally known as the American Committee for Aid to Russia, was created for the sole purpose of raising funds with which to purchase medical supplies, instruments, clothing and other rleated aid to be sent, free of all shipping costs, to the Russian people now occupied in the defense of their families and their homeland. It is the coordinating body for all forms of Russian relief, excluding the Red Cross, in this country, and operated under the prescribed regulations of the President's Committee on War Relief Agencies.

With no political or religious affiliations, and embracing all groups, Russian War Relief buys medical supplies in this country and sends them abroad, the most urgently needed at this time being special types of operating room equipment, surgical supplies, drugs, anesthesia masks, hospital tents, and numerous other items, Mrs. Harriman pointed out.

The shipments are consigned to the Commission for Cultural Relations in Russia, which in turn distributes the supplies to the Red Cross and other agencies in Russia. Russian steamers, it is said, leave American ports every week on which space is provided for the essential medical supplies required by the Russian people.

Murray, president of the C. I. O., has been in the forefront of the campaign for Russian relief ever since its inception.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Mo., June 28, 1942.

Mr. Will Harridge,
President American League,
General Delivery,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. H.:

I know you didn't answer my last letter, but I realize you're a busy man, unlike myself who has time to poke around in matters which may be none of my concern. I was just wondering how long you are going to countenance a situation that is making a joke of your league.

POVICH

For several years now I have been thinking that the American League is superior to the National League, but in one respect I am willing to believe that the National must certainly be the better league. I mean the umpiring. The National League's umpiring must be better for the obvious reason that it can scarcely be worse or even the your umpiring, and to be frank about it I will add that your umpires as a group are of unmatchable incompetence.

I might add, too, that this is no late discovery and that Jimmy Dykes, the White Sox manager, scooped me on the idea some time ago. You may get the notion that Dykes' mother was bitten by an umpire in Jimmy's prenatal days, but anybody who has seen your umpires work consistently can understand his great disgust.

No reflection at all on their integrity, understand. They're nice folks, probably kind to their mothers, and above any suggestion of bad faith, but the woods are full of such upright people who don't have umpiring jobs. It's nice to have good character, but if you are going to hold down a job as a big league umpire, it also helps if you are a good umpire.

The fact is, Mr. H., that there are only about two good umpires in your league, and I probably don't have to tell you who they are. I don't know where the good umpires come from, but there certainly must be men who can outperform the specimens your league has been bringing into the majors these past several years.

What's so sacred about your umpires that they are rarely fired? I remember only a couple of cases of your league firing an umpire in the last ten years. A ball player or a manager who makes one tithe as many mistakes as your umpires would be released within a month, but your men seem to have a life job of it.

Don't tell me they're so good that you don't fire them. Multiply what you see on any given day at any ball park by the number of towns in the league and you'll have a pretty good general idea of the way most of your umpires butcher things, not only on balls and strikes, but on decisions on the bases.

I know it would be tough to keep firing umpires because long ago Ban Johnson built confidence in your league on confidence in his umpires, but maybe you could weed out the incompetents sort of gradual like. Of course you'd have to be big enough to admit that perhaps some of them have been incompetent after all.

Your umpires have pretty soft jobs at pretty good dough and they know it and they seem to know, too, that they can hang onto those jobs as long as their honesty is unquestioned. Most of 'em haven't improved, though, as umpires since they came into the league.

In fact there are signs that they have gone back. You may say the pay scale is an incentive for them to improve, but the minimum is still good dough to some of those guys who know they are lucky to be earning that much.

The trouble with three or four of them is that they try too hard to act like one of your good umpires, Bill McGowan, without respect to whether they are calling 'em right or wrong. They mimic McGowan's positive and colorful actions without his faculty of calling the plays right and it adds up sometimes to a very nauseating spectacle.

They think they have to call a play quick in order to make it look authoritative and as a result we see them every day actually calling plays before the plays happen. If the league is content to put up with that sort of foolishness you at least ought to issue your umpires a clairvoyant's license.

Billy Evans, the best umpire your league ever had, once told me that the worst fault of an umpire was calling the plays too quickly. He said it was a great temptation to do that, because if an umpire hesitated too long it would only cause argument. But Evans was smart enough, firstly, to try to get the play right. He guarded against jerking up his thumb too quickly by standing with his arms folded until he was ready to call the play.

And did you ever notice how the Yankees can get away with browbeating your umpires when the same actions by other clubs would get a half-dozen players run off the field? A little more courage against the Yanks would help balance the league. When Bill Dickey is catching for the Yankees, he virtually umpires the game for most of your men behind the plate simply by acting tough with them. Watch him sometimes. When Dickey barks, they listen.

I just thought I'd write you, Mr. H., thinking some day you might give your umpires a talking-to that might help matters a whole lot.

Yours truly,

S. P.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 28.—Every stride Whirlaway took through the last eighth of a mile in the Brooklyn Handicap meant more bullets, bombs and food for United States service men, and greater glory for himself. Mr. Long Tail, whether he knows it or not, has pledged 10 per cent of his earnings to buy war bonds, which means that he bought $2365 worth by winning $23,650 by dint of that stretch drive. He is now figuratively breathing on Seabiscuit's neck.

CONSIDINE

He ran yesterday as if he knew what he was doing. Georgie Woolf kept him up reasonably close to the pace this time, which means that this will be one of the few races in which he ever appeared wherein the newsreel cameramen have been able to get him in their film panels before the field is in the home stretch. Usually he doesn't even show up in the film until he starts closing ground at the end.

In the Brooklyn he seemed to make up three or four lengths in three or four leaps, along about the eighth pole. He thus became the second horse in history to win more than $400,000. He is now $33,244 back of Seabiscuit's mark of $437,730. Unless Market Wise can recover fully from his cough, and perhaps even if he does, Whirly will shave $25,000 off the difference between himself and the Biscuit next Saturday in the Butler at Empire.

Whirlaway certainly will be remembered with the great horses. Even the fusty gaffers around the Jockey Club are beginning to use the rarely spoken adjective, great, when speaking of Whirlaway—and most of them confine their list of "great" horses to four or five. Man o' War, Exterminator, Sysonby and Domino usually are on their tight little lists.

Clem McCarthy wrote to us recently that any comparison between Sea Biscuit and Whirlaway must take into consideration the facts that Sea Biscuit twice was beaten by the length of his nose for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, and that he came out of stud to win $86,650 in the 1940 renewal of the handicap, under 130 pounds in 2:01 2/5, after breaking down in 1939. All of which makes horse sense and made the Biscuit a memorable horse.

But by the same token, though Whirly's stable didn't have the heartbreak of losing two Santa Anita Handicaps by whiskers, it had the grievous disappointment of not even getting a crack at the world's No. 1 purse. As you'll remember, Whirlaway was sent to the Coast after last season to prepare for the Santa Anita and other rich purses there, but the Japs beat him to the racetrack. It must also be added that Sea Biscuit won $40,000 in place purses for his two seconds in the big Coast race.

If he had won only half as many races as he has, Whirly would be an unforgettable horse. For one thing he is superb looking, his stride is a thing of beauty and he can win after being hopelessly, ludicrously, nerve-wrackingly out of contention. And he is perfectly named. Mrs. Warren Wright selected the name for him, partly because his dam was Dustwhirl, by Sweep, and partly because even as a spindle-legged weanling he was always one to break suddenly and whirl away across the lush, rolling bluegrass of the Wright Farm.

White Sox Defeat Yankees Twice

Brooklyn, Reds Split Double Bill

Derringer Takes 6-3 Opener; Larry French Wins Nightcap, 2-1, After Relief Job

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 28.—Paul Derringer pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the first game of a double-header today, but the National League leaders pulled the nightcap out of the fire, 2-1, to close out the series with an edge of three games to two.

Larry French gained credit for the pitching victory in the second game, his eighth of the year without a defeat, although he worked only two innings in relief. It was French's second triumph in three days, during which he worked a total of only four frames.

For six innings of the nightcap Bucky Walters of the Reds and Kirby Higbe of the Dodgers hooked up in a scoreless pitching duel. The Reds broke the ice in the top half of th seventh on Eddie Joost's double, the second hit of the game off Higbe, a sacrifice and Dolph Camilli's error.

Dixie Walker batted for Higbe in the last half of the same inning, singling the tying run across, and Joe Medwick tripled for the winning marker in the eighth, scoring Pete Reiser who had singled.

French yielded two hits in the ninth but escaped without giving up a score. Walters gave up only five hits in absorbing his sixth defeat against eight wins.

Reds Get 16 Hits

Derringer also pitched five-hit ball in the first game, but the Reds backed him up with a 16-hit attack on three Dodger pitchers to bring him his fourth triumph compared with as many losses.

Whitlaw Wyatt started for the Brooks, seeking his eighth victory, but he would up instead with his second defeat as the Reds belted him for eight blows and chased him to the showers in the fourth inning, when they scored three runs and broke a 2-2 tie.

Frank McCormick led the attack on Wyatt, Hugh Casey and Newt Kimball with four hits in five trips to the plate, driving in three of the six runs.

The Dodgers held their nine-game lead in the National League since the second-place St. Louis Cardinals also split a pair with the Philadelphia Phils.

Kraft Wins Trans-Miss. Golf Crown

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, June 28.—John Kraft, the Colorado Giant Killer, won the forty-second Trans-Mississippi Golf tournament today, beating Irl Oliver of Kansas City 4 and 3 in a 36-hole match.

It was the Denver physical education director's first crown in 12 years of Trans competition, and he won the hard way Before his finals match, Kraft eliminated the two pretournament favorites, Defending Champion Frankie Stranahan of Toledo and Johnny Goodman of Omaha.

His clash with Oliver was pretty much a repetition of the manner in which he won his four previous duels. The Missouri lad outdrove him, but yielded to the Iowa-born star in accuracy off the tee, and was no match for Kraft on the greens.

Oliver took a bogie 6 on the first hole, and spent the rest of the day trying to recover ground. At one time in the morning round Kraft held a 3 up margin, and although the lanky red-head began to pare the gap at the tenth, when Kraft landed in the rough, the Westener still held a 1-stroke margin at the end of the first 18.

The Denver star jumped the span again early in the afternoon round when Oliver failed to equal regulation figures on the twenty-second and twenty-third. The Kansas Citian began to whittle down his lead again by taking the next hole with a birdie 2, but two holes later Kraft holed out a long putt, and after that there was little doubt about the outcome.

The only par performance was Kraft's 37 on the first nine of the afternoon circuit.

Two Bouts Added To Wednesday Wrestling Show

A couple of additional matches were closed out yesterday for Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, to be headlined by "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, of the United States Coast Guard, and Michele Leone, the new sensation from Boston.

Tommy O'Toole, also of the Coast Guard, who lost a close match to Jimmy Londos, the champion, last Thursday has been booked to meet Tony Milan, 250-pound Jersey newcomer, in the semiwindup tussle.

"I'm giving Tommy a chance to prove that he deserves another shot at Londos," Promoter Turner stated. "He did a good job against Londos, and I think he's one of the finest young wrestlers around today."

Jim Austeri, veteran New Yorker, and Fred Grobier, the lean and lank Des Moines, Iowa, scissors expert, have been matched for a 30-minute scrap.

Chappelle and Blair Win Mixed Bowling

Margaret Chappelle and Charles Blair last night won a Tea Ball bowling tournament held at the Alexandria Recreation Center in Alexandria. Beating out more than 50 other couples, the winners shot 609 which, with a 30 handicap, gave tnem a total of 639.

Miss Chappelle's set scores were 192-92-79, and Blair's were 118-104-114.

Outfielder's Head Responsible for Homer

New Berlin, Pa., June 28 (AP).—An outfielder was given an assist for L. Bauers' home run here in a semipro baseball game.

Bauers' hard hit ball struck the top of the left field stands, bounced high, came down on the head of the opposing left fielder, and promptly rebounded over the fence.

The umpire ruled it a fair home run.

Cardoza Beaten

B'nai B'rith won its sixth straight game in the Fraternal Softball League yesterday as Dr. "Dutch" Weinstein doubled home two runs in the fifth to defeat Cardoza, 3-1.

Nats Finally Capture 2 Games, 14-13, 7-6

Estalella Homers With 2 On in Opener; Wilson and Zuber Pounded; Sundra Is Beaten

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, June 28.—Maybe we'd better give this to you piecemeal, just to lessen the jolt: The Nats won the first game of a double-header from the Browns today, 14-13.

And in the second game, well, the Nats won that, too, by a score of 7-6. Honest, the Nats won both games of a double-header.

They threw their Sunday punch at the Browns in that first game to win despite some horrible pitching by Jack Wilson and Bill Zuber. Bobby Estalella slugged the Nats into a 9-9 tie in the fourth inning with his seventh homer of the season—a belt far into the left-field stands with two on and two out. From there the Nats went on to win, but not by much.

The Browns slugged Wilson, Zuber and Alex Carrasquel for 19 hits in that first game, a fact we insert just to give you an idea. The Nats made 16 hits off St. Louis pitchers too numerous to mention.

In the second game, the Nats met up with their old pal Steve Sundra. He hasn't changed much. They retired him in six innings after swatting him for four runs in the fourth to take a 4-2 lead. Eventually, though, they had to come from behind to win the game with two runs in the eighth against George Caster, powered mostly by Jake Early's two-bagger.

Alex in Both Games

Alex Carrasquel, who pitched a relief stint in the first game, was also a help in that second game. Bucky Harris entrusted Rookie Ray Scarborough with a two-run lead in the ninth inning and when the rookie passed the first hitter and had two balls on McQuinn, Carrasquel got the pitching job.

The Venezuelan struck out McQuinn but the bases were full of Browns by the time he got the side out. Lalabs beat out a hit to Repass and when Criscola grounded to Sullivan it looked like a double play and the end of the game, but Pofahl threw wild to first and a Brown run scored. With two out Stephens doubled to center to move the tying run to third and Carrasquel then walked Chartak to fill the bases. He sealed the Nats victory by luring Rick Ferrell into popping a foul to Repass for the final out.

The Browns took a 2-0 lead off Walter Masterson in the second inning when Sundra himself doubled two runs home, but the Nats bounced right back with four runs on five hits in the fourth. George Case, who made four hits in the

Heafner Wins Golf Crown With Hot 264

By the Associated Press

Mahoning Country Club, Girard, Ohio, June 28.—His irons deadly and his drives true when he needed them, Bulky Clayton Heafner blazed home in three-below-par 65 today to successfully defend his Mahoning Open title with a smashing 264—as low as any marksman ever scored in a recognized golf tournament.

HEAFNER

Thus the big blond biffer from Durham, N. C., who worked in a candy factory before his golf game became sweet enough to put him in the professional ranks, tied Craig Wood's world record 264 of 1940 Metropolitan Open vintage with rounds of 66, 65, 68 and 65—only to see it stay out of the record books. The Professional Golf Association's Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran explained the par 68 Mahoning Valley Golf Club course is shy several hundred yards—or about a hole—what it would have to be for a recognized mark.

Heafner, who will be 28 next month, recalled he had never won a major tournament until he took the Mahoning Open last year. "I think I'll have to move here," he remarked.

$1000 Prize

For his gruelling eight below par on the 72 holes, he collected the $1000 top prize.

The Carolinian pulled home three strokes ahead of Lanky E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the "Arkansas traveler" from Harrisburg, Pa., and Horton Smith, of Pinhurst, N. C., the runner-up.

Braves Blank Cubs, 3-0; Lose Nightcap, 5-1

By International News Service

Boston, June 28.—The Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs split a twin-bill to divide a four-game series this afternoon before a crowd of 15,000.

Jim Tobin, pitching three-hit ball, steered the Braves to a 3-to-0 victory over Claude Passeau in the opener, while Verne Olsen limited the Stengels to five hits in chalking up a 5-to-1 decision in the nightcap.

The Braves employed Lefty Tost, Manny Salvo, John Sain and Lefty Wallace in the second game. The quartet yielded nine hits, including Len Merullo's second homer of the year, which came in the ninth after the Cubs' shortstop had made only two hits in his 50 previous trips to the plate.

Nanny Fernandez hit his fifth homer of the year for the Tribe in the ninth inning of the opener.

Humphries, Lyons Win By 6-2, 13-1

Chicago's Largest Crowd of Season Sees Red Ruffing, Tiny Bonham Lose

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 28.—The Chicago White Sox handed the New York Yankees their first doubleheader defeat of the season today, taking the first game 6 to 2 and pounding out a 13-to-1 decision in the second.

The twin killing, displayed before the city's largest crowd of the season, 38,042, cut the champions American League lead to 5½ games.

In the opener, the patriarch Ted Lyons drew abreast Red Ruffing in life-time victories with 251 by pitching eight-hit ball while the Sox totaled 14 blows off the veteran Ruffing. Lyons, himself, doubled in two runs and scored a third after singling.

Johnny Humphries coasted to an eight-hit triumph in the nightcap after seven hits, including homers by Don Kolloway and Tom Turner, kayoed Ernie Bonham in the third inning with the Chicagoans leading 6 to 0.

It was the first time Bonham had been batted from the mound since April 24 and only the second time this season. The defeat was his third against nine wins and Ruffing's fourth against seven victories.

Manager Joe McCarthy was confined to his hotel during the games by illness and did not plan to accompany the Yankees to Philadelphia tonight after their ground-losing Western trip in which they dropped nine games and won five. He expected to rejoin them in a day or so.

Phil Rizzuto, the Yanks' popular shortstop, was forced to retire early in the second contest after twisting his knee in the opener when Outfielder Taft Wright slid into him in a play at second base. Robert Rolfe, taking over third as Frankie Crosetti shifted to short, made his first appearance on the field in 1942. Later he doubled and singled in three trips.

Lyons' victory was his sixth in 11 games this year. He broke a 1-1 tie with his double in the second and

Segura Wins Tri-State Net Title in 4 Sets

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 28.—Chunky Francisco Segura of Ecuador pounded two-hand drives past Billy Talbert of Cincinnati today to win the forty-first Tri-State Tennis Championship 1—6, 6—1, 6—2, 12—10.

The swarthy South American from Guayaquil covered the court tirelessly and wrecked Talbert's hopes of scoring from the net by blasting the sideline chalk in the colorful two-handed style he adopted when as a 10-year-old he was too weak to wield a racquet with one hand."

Segura, a Miami (Fla.) University junior, was seeded first among four Latin American entrants. Talbert, 23-year-old insurance salesman and tenth-ranking United States player, topped domestic seedings.

In the grueling final set the score was tied nine times after Segura had taken a two-game lead.

Catherine Wolf of Elkhart, Ind., tri-State champion in 1939, won the women's singles against Monica Nolan of Cincinnati, 6—4, 6—1.

Segura and 17-year-old Fred Kovaleski of Detroit won the men's doubles in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, from Corpl. J. Gilbert Hall, 44-year-old Fort Knox, Ky., Army tank driver, and Alejo Russell, 1940 Argentine champion.

Once a Dodger, Always One, Says 'Memphis' Terry

By the Associated Press

Kingsport, Tenn., June 28.—Bill Terry thinks a Dodger is a Dodger, whether he be in New York or on a farm club.

The general manager of the New York Giants was here watching the Bristol Twins, a Giant farm club, play the Kingsport Dodgers, a Brooklyn farm club, when came the seventh inning stretch. Terry kept his seat.

Asked by a Kingsport fan why he didnt stand, Terry replied:

Greyhound 'Roy Reigels' Costs Track $33,544

Revere, Mass., June 28 (AP).—Ding He ouiled a "Roy Riegels" at the Wonderland Park Dog Track last night.

The Greyhound fell soon after the start of the race. He was on his feet quickly enough, but started running the wrong way.

He met the field in the back stretch coming in the other direction and bungled things so that the track declared it "no race" and refunded $33,544 in wagerings.

Wilcox Again Wins Iowa Golf

Waterloo, Iowa, June 28 (AP).—Pat Willcox, the big Waterloo professional, won his third straight Iowa Open golf championship here today, beating out Jim Gardner, Sioux City amateur, by a single stroke when his foe missed a 3-foot putt on the final hole.

Willcox, who opened his title bid with a 71, two strokes behind Gardner, fired a 70 and a 69 in the final 36 holes today for a 210 total.

Ed Dudley Takes $1200 Utah Open

Salt Lake City, June 28 (AP).—Ed Dudley, president of the P. G. A., won the $1200 Utah Open golf tournament today with a 10 under par 278.

The Colorado Springs golfer started the final 36 holes with 140 and scored a pair of 69s, three under par for each round.

Leonard Ottt, Denver professional, and John Bulla of Chicago tied for second with 281s. On the final 36 holes Ott had a 72 and 74 and Bulla a pair of 70s.

3 Horses Set High Jump Record of 7 Feet at Columbus Show

Sport Marvel, Gratchino, Cateer Tie

Four Others Clear 6½ Feet in Remarkable Fencing Exhibition Before 2,000 Fans

By Anne Hagner

Horse show precedent and the local high jumping record yesterday went shattering as three horses leaped 7 feet in the Columbus Horse Show at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club.

U. S. Randle's Sport Marvel, David Martin's Cateer and Mickey Magill's Gratchino tied at 7 feet after four other entries, who had survived the 6½-foot mark, were out of the running because of knockdowns or refusals.

Sport Marvel, not many seasons ago a champion conformation hunter, went clean at the record height, with veteran Tommy Cook up, after two knockdowns. Three trials were permitted at each height.

Gratchino, with he 17-year-old owner in the saddle, scored one knockdown and then jumped the big obstacle, although she knocked out the lowest boards in the fence. Her effort was allowed, however, because she did not change the height of the jump.

Cateer, apparently with wings on his heels, sailed over the mountain of poles on his first trial, bringing forth the biggest ovation of the day from the crowd of 2000 who watched the 2½-hour jumping duel.

Mrs. Edythe Bleakney's R. A. F., with the widely known high jump rider, Joe Green, up, twice crashed on top of the fence, and Randle's Way, ridden by Owner Joe Pohzehl, made three game efforts, but also went out on knockdowns.

Seeks Another Mark

Mrs. Elizabeth Cornell's Lew Dunbar and Jolea Farms' King Rock, with Margaret Cotter aboard, likewise took the knockdown rout out, leaving Sport Marvel, Cateer and Gratchino to battle it out at 7½ feet.

At that point the three riders felt somewhat inclined to call it a contest, but friends urged them to carry on with the hope of breaking the 7-foot 2-inch mark set for the New York area in 1940 by Mr. and Mrs. William Kennedy's Erin's Son at Westchester County, N. Y.

With the top bar so high that members of the ring committee had to stand on chairs to reach it, Cateer had two hard knockdowns and then refused; Gratchino refused twice and then wisely was pulled up by young Magill, and Sport Marvel made three thrilling efforts but each time pulled down the top pole, leaving the 7-foot bar intact.

Randle's Hunters Win

Of the nine entries that started at 5½ feet in the class, all lasted until the 6½-foot mark, and only Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bogley's Ringmaster, ultimate jumper champion, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Merrill's Thunder Boy failed to clear it.

The coveted Bobby Robey Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the horse scoring the most points during the show, went to Mr. and Mrs. Randle's Troop, who earned 33 points and also won the working hunter championship.

The conformation hunter title, too, went to the Randle barn as Gee Ray Bee, usually subordinated to Troop in such competition, outpointed Eileen Brent's toppy gelding, Ramos. Frost Anderson and Tommy Cook, both of The Plains, Va., shared riding honors on the Randle combination and Newton Mayo did most of the saddle work on Ramos, while Mrs. W. Haggin Perry took over in several events.

Mr. and Mrs. Bogley's Ringmaster won his first important show ring crown as he made a late challenge to nose out Mr. and Mrs. William Watchler's steady New York importation, Tops'l, ridden by Mrs. Watchler. Ringmaster was making his final appearance with his owner up, as Bogley joins the United States Coast Guard next week.

A Game Try for That 7-Foot Record . . . And Cateer Accomplishes It

Eagles Beat Grays, 6 to 5; 2d Called, 1-1

Coming from behind, the Newark Eagles, of the Negro National League, defeated the Washington Homestead Grays in the initial clash of a doubleheader at Griffith Stadium yesterday, before 9000 fans, 6-5, in 14 innings.

The night-cap, scheduled as a 7-inning affair was called at the end of the overtime ninth, tied up, 1-1.

In the first three innings of the first game the Grays scored, but the Eagles tied the count in the fifth, when "Pint" Israel and Ted Stone drew walks from Ray Brown, and Ed Wells and Len Pearson hit in succession to center, driving the two across the plate.

In the sixth inning Carlisle lined sharply to right, Vic Harris sacrificed him to second, and he came home to break the 3-3 tie on Sam Bankhead's drive through the box to centerfield.

But the Eagles took the lead again going into the ninth, Stone's liner to right sending Israel and Thomas scampering across the plate. Then Chet Williams, in the Gray's half-inning, hit past Dandridge, scoring Watley, who had gone in to run for Judd Wilson, tying the count once more, this time at 5-all.

Ray Brown had his own game in his hands in the eleventh inning when he came to bat with the bases loaded, and two out. Brown lined to Israel who dropped the ball but recovered and from a sitting position, tossed to second forcing Williams out. The game was won in the fourteenth when Wells doubled and came home on Leon Day's screeching liner to left.

Surf Club, Linen Tens in Arc Game

Surf Club and Standard Linen will renew an old feud tonight when they clash in a Sports Center Night Softball League game at Washington Softball Stadium.

Both teams are loaded with former Senate Beer players, including Abe Rosenfield, now with Standard Linen and scheduled to start on the mound tonight. Six of Rosenfield's former Senate teammates will be swinging their war clubs at him for Surf Club.

In their last meeting, yesterday in a Sunday Morning League game, the Linemen beat Surf Club as Benny Rubin gave one hit.

Prince Georges Club Title to Joe Balestri

Johnson Beaten in 36-Hole Finals, 6 and 4; Indian Spring Golfers Defeat Kenwood, 34-14

Joe Balestri remained within a few shots of par figures for 32 holes yesterday to win the Prince Georges Club Championship with a 6-and-4 victory over Everett Johnson, who trailed from the very first hole.

Balestri, making his third appearance in four years in the title round of the club tournament won his second crown. His previous triumph was in 1939. Last year he lost to Jimmy Gipe. Balestri was comedalist this year.

The new champion posted an approximate 74 for the morning round as he led Johnson, 3 up. Balestri gradually added to his lead in the afternoon and closed the match on the fourteenth green. He played but and had 73 in the afternoon.

Mrs. J. M. Palmer won the Ladies' Golf Committee Cub with a gross 96 minus 19 handicap shots for a net 77. Mrs. William Stewart was second with 105-26, 79, and Mrs. J. B. Douglas third, 107-23, 84.

The driving, approaching and putting contests, continued, with Jim Gipe and Ralph Byers taking men's honors and Bessie Taylor and Mrs. C. E. Purdy winning among the women. The finals will be held next weekend.

First flight consolation—Roger Sherriff defeated Billy Griffin, 2 and 1.

Second flight—R. H. Wagner defeated Charles Jory, 4 and 3; Consolation—C. E. Purdy defeated Ralph Byers, 2 up.

Third flight—F. Schwartz defeated Dr. Paul Herring, 1 up, 19 holes. Consolation—K. S. Wright defeated H. Fuhrmann, 1 up.

Fourth flight—Paul Herring, jr., defeated S. C. Heifer, 2 and 1. Consolation—Benny Austin defeated G. L. Haynes, 1 up.

INDIAN SPRING

Professional Mel Shorey and his partner, Dr. A. T. Utz, the District of Columbia Golf Association president, led Indian Spring's golf team to a 34-14 victory over Kenwood, over the winners' course. The Shorey-Utz team won two out of three points from visiting professional Gerge Diffenbaugh and Frank Schrider, golf committee chairman, despite Diffenbaugh's 70. Sharey had 71.

In the match between the two top amateur duos, Arthur Urban and Jim Huntt of the victors put together too many birdies for Joe Wilson and Bill Briggs of the Kenwood team and won all three points.

Indian Spring members contributed more than $27 to the Army-Navy Relief fund.

CONGRESSIONAL

Edward R. Burke, former Senator from Nebraska, and George K. Brobeck, the club's rapidly improving golfer, tied in Congressional's sweepstakes competition yesterday with net 67s. The former had 46-44, 90-23, 67, and Brobeck 44-41, 85-17, 67.

WASHINGTON

Clyde Kellogg and R. P. Brandt posted a best ball 75 and minus a combined handicap allowance of 16 strokes tied W. S. Nelson and F. S. Pomeroy with best ball 59s in the two-man best ball handicap play at Washington Golf and Country Club. Nelson and Pomeroy had 74-15, 59.

ARGYLE

Argyle's low-handicapped members took the higher handicapped players as partners in a "Pro-Amateur" event which went to J. E. Duffy and partner J. M. Klinginsmith with a best ball 63. All players received three-fourths handicap allowance.

Duffy finished in a popular second place tie with another partner, W. I. Brinley, with 65s. Others at that figure were Fritz Williams with two partners, R. L. Bedell and Cliff Scoggins, H. Miller with R. Nickel and Ray Amsden and A. Black. Amsden and William were the low "pro" scorers with two-over par 74s.

WOODMONT

Three duos emerged as comedalists with net scores of 67 in Woodmont's novel event, a scotch foursome handicap match play tournament, played selective drives and alternate shots. One-half the full combined handicap was allowed.

William Ilch and L. V. Freudberg had 81—14, 67; Cabot Feldman and Ellis Edlowitz, 77-10, 67, and Ed Wortman and Bob Phillipson, 78-11, 67.

The first match must be played on or before July 11. The entry fee was $1 per person and 25 cents went to the D. C. Golf Association's War Relief Fund Drive.

Cabot Feldman and Ellis Edlowitz vs. Jules Winkleman and Milton Gladstein, Dave Legum and Al Miller vs. Ralph Goldsmith and A. E. Steinem; Ed Wortman and Bob Phillipson vs. Milton Abramson and Dr. Milton Greenberg, Adiai Mann and Al Al Goldstein vs. Garfield Kass and George Wasserman, L. V. Bernstein and Dr. Sam Bordonoff, Malcom Levy and Maury Young vs. Fulton Brylawski and Buddy Brylawski.

BANNOCKBURN

First round matches were completed in the Barry Pate Cup play at Bannockburn, a two-man team, best ball event.

The Bannockburn Women's golf committee decided to cancel the 18-hole Invitation Tournament scheduled July 7.

Results

E. Piper and C. D. Dye defeated F. H. Smith and J. E. O'Donnell, 6 and 5; R. B. Tyler and B. H. Benidt defeated T. G. Herbert and T. Waggaman, 3 and 2; G. Keene and J. Graybeal defeated R. F. Tener and A. R. Gordon, 3 and 2; Leo Pass and Tom Hunter defeated F. F. Pierdon and G. MacDonald, 2 up; F. J. Hanrahan and A. Cleary defeated M. Irvine and S. Fletcher, 1 up; W. C. Whittle and C. Brewer and W. Brewer defeated J. Curtain and W. Carter, 1 up; F. Pellegrin and A. Martino defeated R. L. Burgdoff, sr., and R. L. Burgdoff, jr., 1 up.

KENWOOD

Dr. Kirby Smith put nine handicap strokes to advantage in winning Kenwood's Match Play Against Par event by beating regulation figures, 2 up. Seven tied for second, all even with par.

The winners and stroke allowance: Harry Sharpe, 7; W. F. Watkins, 10; C. Hennigan, 14; J. E. Voll, 7; L. W. Perce, 16; H. D. Barker, 16, and Sam O'Neal, 18.

EAST POTOMAC

Roy Smith and Earl Marcey will meet in the East Potomac Spring Match Play finals some time this week. Smith advanced to the title round with a 6 and 5 victory over George Thornton while Marcey stepped up by defeating Brick Chisolm, 4 and 3.

Harry Colburn occupied one of the semifinal berths in the second 16 with a 1 up victory over George Benard while Bill Dean made the round of four in the third flight with a 1 up win over Joe Zoeller. The fifth flight finals will pit Jack Medley, who defeated Willis Bary, 1 up, against Thomas Caulk, a 3 and 2 victor over George Kathan.

Former-pro Cliff Spencer continued his occasional sub-par rounds by romping around B course in 32 strokes, four under par.

MANOR

R. N. Trezise is the new putting champion at Manor Country Club. In the mixed event held yesterday on the practice green at 18-hole matches, Trezise defeated H. A. Neff, 2 up, in the finals.

Neff won over Col. M. F. Thrum, 2 and 1, in the semifinals and the winner eliminated the last surviving women's contender, Mrs. J. T. Powell, 1 up.

Phils Capture 15-Inning Tilt, Bow in Second

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 28.—Pitching one of the best games of his career Tommy Hughes led the Phils to a 2-to-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in an exciting 15-inning struggle that gave the Phils a split in a double-header today. The Cards took the second game, 3 to 1, behind the five-hit pitching of Lon Warneke and Walker Cooper's hitting.

Hughes went the entire distance in the overtime opening game and won out when Ernie Koy singled with the bases full in the fifteenth. The hi tscored Stan Banjamin, who ran for Hughes.

Hughes gave up only 10 hits. He collapsed on the bench after the tenth inning when he ran from first to third, but was revived and came back strong.

Johnny Beazley kept pace with Hughes for 12 innings, but gave way to Howard Krist in the thirteenth with two on and none out. Krist was charged with the loss, his first in two years after 13 straight wins.

Eight-Run Inning Gives Boston First Game Behind Oscar Judd; Jim Bagby Is Beaten

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 28.—A pinch single by Hurler Chubby Dean in the eighth inning today scored Oris Hockett to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-to-2 victory and an even break in a double-header with Boston's Red Sox. Boston won the first game 8 to 3 before 19,547 fans.

The victory protected the Tribe's claim to third place from Detroit, which also split a twin bill.

Outhit in both contests, the Tribesmen made their six safeties count in the second game, tallying once in the fourth, sixth and eighth. Charley Wagner issued seven bases on balls and the Indians converted two of them into runs.

The first game was an exhibition of Boston's vaunted batting power which drove Jim Bagby and Charley Embree to the showers in the fifth with an eight-run spree.

Bagby was protecting a one-run lead until the avalanche smothered him. Dom DiMaggio led the assault with a triple and a single to drive in three runs. Jim Tabor's bingle with bases loaded accounted for two more. Bill Conroy's double and Bobby Doerr's bingle drove in a pair.

Allie Stolz Choice Over Billy Banks In Fight Tonight

Allie Stolz, No. 1 lightweight contender, will be a 2-to-1 betting favorite over Billy (Tiger) Banks, local colored boxer, when the pair square off tonight in the 10-round main attraction in Baltimore's Coliseum.

STOLZ

The Newark, N. J., fighter who recently dropped a close decision to Champion Sammy Angott, will be making his first appearance in a Baltimore ring while Banks is showing for the fifth time as a headliner.

In Banks' last fight on the Navy Relief card here, he outpointed Joey Torres in eight rounds. Prior to that Banks dropped a decision to Bobby Ruffin, ranked No. 3 in the lightweight division.

Tonight's winner may be matched with Angott, providing a commendable showing is made.

Baker Meets Bensinger in Junior Final

Bobby Bensinger, the District junior tennis champion, will meet an unexpectedly strong threat to his city of Washington junior title this morning at 10 o'clock when he plays unseeded W. Browne Baker, formerly of Texas, in the finals of the junior competition on the Friends School courts.

Also on the program will be the boys singles finals between John Bucknell and LeRoy Morgan, scheduled for 10, and the doubles finals of both divisions. In the junior section, Bensinger and John Waits, jr., play Baker and Ed Sachs, and in the boys, Bucknell and Morgan will team up against Billy Bernard and Bob Smith.

Bensinger, routed by Frank Willett of Alabama recently in the first annual Columbia Country Club junior tournament, was expected to mop up in the city of Washington event, for Willett wasn't entered and none of Bobby's old local rivals was deemed skillful enough to extend him.

But then up popped this Baker lad, unseeded and unsung, to upset first second-seeded John Waits, jr., then Delos Smith, and then fourth-seeded Britt Schweitzer, and win plenty of backing for his match with Bensinger.

Despite all this, however, Bensinger will rule at least an even choice to continue his domination of local junior ranks and the match is expected to be very close.

In the boys division where the field was so well matched that no seedings were made, Bucknell and Morgan emerged as the undisputed cream of the crop and their title match should be nip-and-tuck.

Morgan's forte is a powerful forehand, while Bucknell stakes his hopes on his steadiness.

Whirly, Jockey Woolf Explode Myth of Arcaro's Greatness

Calumet Colt May Earn Half Million

Nears Seabiscuit's Money-Winning Mark After Great Race In Brooklyn 'Cap

By the Associated Press

New York, June 28.—It is becoming an increasing wonder that Whirlaway didn't bust his sides out with all the laughing he must have been doing at the expense of a lot of the "experts" for the last year or so.

He must have been doing the horse equivalent of haw-hawing a large portion of the time. That is, when he wasn't running, which he also has done quite a bit of, since his earnings now amount to $404,486. He not only looks like a cinch to break Seabiscuit's $437,730 money-winning record by July 15, but also to become the turf's first half-million dollar breadwinner before he's through.

Ever since he became famous in the Kentucky Derby a year ago under the handling of Eddie Arcaro, after showing a lot of wacky ways of running earlier in the year, the myth has been built up that he only proved that Arcaro is the greatest jockey of them all—that the Kentucky Italian made him what he is.

Woolf Rode Him Twice

But in his two most recent outings, Georgie Woolf has been on him. And all the iceman has done with Mr. Bigtail is smash Aqueduct's track record for a mile and an eighth and then crack the mark for the mile-and-a-quarter Brooklyn Handicap yesterday, as the feature on a card from which war relief netted $100,000.

And these two outings came shortly after Arcaro had given him anything but a brilliant ride in the Suburban, when he bowed to Market Wise.

From these developments, it does not take a crystal ball and a cup of tea leaves to leave you with the idea that (A) it's the horse, not the jockey and the fat lady in the circus probably could ride him, and (B) that Woolf proves what the jockeys say about him—"the classiest money rider in the business."

The iceman from San Bruno, Calif., shows in those stake races—when the heavy sugar is up—that he has forgotten most of the answers the others haven't yet learned.

Brought Up Earlier

When Whirly, for instance, he definitely proved that the little fellow doesn't have to loll around a city block behind the field until he gets ready to go. Yesterday, Woolf had Warren Wright's whizzer no farther back than seven lengths off the pace at any stage. And when Georgie clucked the "let's go," Whirlaway turned loose his stretch lightning to run the last quarter in 24 2-5, for a 2:02 2-5 mile and a quarter.

Perhaps no one was more grateful for this brand new theory on how to ride Whirlaway then the colt himself. You know, in some of his races, he's been held so far back, he's had to make up 20 lengths or so, and if you think that's a soft touch, try it some time.

DeChard Seeks Spot on Benefit Card for Drew

Joe Turner's list of volunteer fighters for next Monday night's boxing show at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the family of the late Preston Drew, boxer who lost his life recently, continued to grow yesterday with Jimmy DeChard as the latest to enlist.

DeChard, managed by Frankie Mannx, a former District Golden Gloves champion, offered his services to Promoter Turner, saying:

"You can get me any heavyweight you want. This is for a worthy cause, and I know that it's tough on the boy's wife and children. We fellows ought to do everything we can to give them as much money as possible from this show."

Manager Mann also praised the spirit shown by the ten volunteer boxers and Promoter Turner's desire to turn over a healthy amount to Drew's family.

Drew died in Emergency Hospital following injuries he suffered in a match with Lew Hanbury at the ball park.

Hanbury, griefstricken was the first to offer to fight free, and Promoter Turner has selected Wayman Stewart, Washington colored boy as his opponent for a six-rounder. Roy Dunn and Ken (Young) Stribling are meeting in another six-rounder and in a bout closed out yesterday Bobby Gantt will take on Jimmy Hill, who was beaten by Dunn at the Stadium on the Hanbury-Drew ill-fated card.

With heavyweights pretty scarce, Turner is combing the East for a possible opponent for DeChard, who won from Frank Poredo in his last appearance on the Naval Relief Show. Also he is lining up opponents for Jabbo Kenner, Gus Mirman, Eddie Kane Leon Kennedy, Charlie and Danny Petro and Georgie Parks.

Tigers Trip A's, 3-2; Then Are Beaten, 3-0

Detroit, June 28.—After capturing the first game of today's doubleheader to make it three straight over the lowly Athletics, the Detroit Tigers were shut out in the nightcap, 3 to 0, as Pitcher Luman Harris scattered five hits.

A single in the ninth by Pinch Hitter Don Ross gave Detroit a 3 to 2 win in the first game. With the score tied at two-all, Ross brought in Ned Harris. Harold Newhouser gave up only three hits for his third victory of the season.

Russ Christopher, on the mound for the A's, permitted seven hits and was charged with his third loss of the year. He has won two games.

The Athletics rapped Paul Trout and Hal White for 14 hits in winning the second game. White came in after Trout pitched the first seven innings.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Jockey Danny Scocca has shifted to Delaware Park and hopes to ride there the next few days. He suffered a bruised leg muscle when Balkanese, which he was unsaddling, kicked him last Saturday. I'm told that Owner J. L. Friedman is the largest money winner in purses at the meeting. We'll have to check on that. This is the final week of the victory meeting. Charles Town is all out for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities. You can do your part by coming out to the track. Everybody has missed Jockey Pappy Witmer at the meeting. He has a good job in Hagerstown and apparently has given up riding. I never will forget the day at Bel Air when Pappy told the boys, "The only way I can lose this race is to fall off." And he did just that as the horses left the gate. Witmer was so mad he sat on the track and threw his whip at the horse. Gay Chic went very lame in that race on Saturday. Moved up as if he were going to win it before the mishap. Hagerstown is getting an edge for its 10-day meeting a week from tomorrow. By the way, the Hagerstown Owls will play night games almost every night during the meeting. More power to Whirlaway and hats off to Trainer Ben Jones. Both are champions. Keep your eyes on this Charles Town apprentice, Al Bocson. The Detroit boy improves with every mount. He has as good riding form as any boy on the track and is an excellent judge of pace. He was around the small tracks for almost four years before he earned his big chance and he is now showing the stuff that is not made overnight. He is a good boy, too, and I would like to see him get a chance on the big tracks. Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has arranged a good nine-race program for today. Try to make it. If you can't get up, listen to the broadcast of the fourth and fifth races over WOL in Washington or WFMD in Frederick. But I'd rather see you on the rail. BILL.

First race—BLACK MAGIC has shown enough to warrant a top selection in juvenile company of this sort. If the track remains off, this one will be right at home. MORNING TIME weakened right at the end in that previous outing and is a threat today. FREE BOY will be right there if taken off the reserve list.

Second race—AMPERAGE was almost left at the post last out and was rushed to contention. She finished second. With better racing luck this one should win, TIME HER is the one to beat. TAUT will like the short route.

Third race—KATE SMITH may take the top on these and lead every step of the way. She has the speed and has won at this distance. DUCHESS DEL was shut off in the stretch last out and is dangerous. BIG GAY is at his best now.

Fourth race—LENA GIRL and SHOWABAL are a tight fit in this affair. I prefer them in the order listed. PORTET has been shopping around for a spot and this could be the field.

Fifth race—REMOLEE will be at home at this route and seems ready to turn back the opposition. HAPPY SLAVE did not have the best of racing luck last out and is a threat. My ONE to take care of the others.

Sixth race—HIBLAZE is the best of those gathered for this event. Seems capable of winning despite high weight. GOLD SWEEP'S last was good. ROVING EYE for the minor award.

Seventh race—TRYSAK needs only to run back to that last to take care of these. BAR SHIP was never better and belongs close. WEST SEA in rounding into form and is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—MARKET PLACE will have his race track, I believe and should take it all in this field. NYLEVE closes strongly and belongs in the first flight. G. C. HAMILTON did everything asked last out.

Ninth race—SIR TIME may take the top on this gang and be hard to catch. I'm going to string along. REAL BOY is good now and will be a threat. GALWAY belongs in the thick of the stretch battle.

Best bet—TRYSAK.

Miller, Naiman Nines Win in National 'A'

Miller Furniture defeated Jacobsen's Florists, 2-1, in a Section A game of the National City League yesterday on the Ellipse. In another clash, Naiman downed Taft, 6-5, on the Taft field. All Section B games were postponed because of the weather.

In the junior section, Fort Stevens beat Pizza, 7-1, and then were licked, 4-0, by Washington Flour. The Benning A. C. blanked Immaculate Conception, 10-0, as Hurler Smith pitched a no-hit, no-run, seven-inning game.

Junior Legion Player Safe at Third in Ellipse Game

White Sox Beat Yanks Twice By 6-2, 13-1

was in complete command after that.

Wright, who posted two singles in the opener, collected a double and three singles in the after-piece. The Sox shelled Norman Branch, Bonham's successor, with five runs in the fifth with the aid of two errors—one of which was a wild pitch that allowed two runs to come in.

The Chicagoans made their final two runs off Johnny Lindell in the eighth.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Saturday's game, won by the Yanks 7-3, was played under protest by Manager Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox.

Dykes charged that Tommy Henrich of the Yanks had been allowed what amounted to a second time at bat in the first inning after apparently forcing a teammate at third base on a tap near the plate.

The Dinky tap was ruled foul by the plate umpire, after which Henrich filed to center field. Dykes claimed the ball hit Henrick's bat twice in his first effort and that he should have been out.

The Chicago manager was waved to the showers and umpire Bill Geisel, one of his conversational opponents, was injured in an accidental collision with Pitcher Spud Chandler of the Yanks later in the game.

Geisel remained in Mercy hospital today, under observation for a possible concussion. He was expected to be out of action several days. Art Passarella worked in Geisel's place at today's double header.

Nats Beat Browns, 14-13, 7-6; Zuber and Masterson Winners

second game, singled, Cullenbine doubled, and Estalella and Early singled. Masterson beat out a bunt that also figured in the scoring.

Laabs Homers

Masterson gave up a run to the Browns in the sixth and in the seventh Chet Laabs tied the score with a homer into center field. A bit later, McQuillan tripled to right center and the Browns went in front, 5-4, on Stephens' double to center.

In the eighth, one run behind, the Nats came up with two after Caster hit Estalella with a pitched ball. Early doubled against the right-center wall, Pofahl got one run home with a long fly and a bit later Case got his fourth hit of the game, to score early.

In the ninth, Vernon walked, stole second, took third on a passed ball and scored on Cullenbine's fly to improve the Nats' lead to 7 to 5, and Carrasquel just did make it last in the Browns' ninth.

From the outset of that first game runs came cheaply. The Browns took a 1-0 lead in the first inning against Wilson when Mickey Vernon threw a double-play ball into center field and Laabs followed with a triple to left.

The Nats bounced back with a six-run inning against Hollingsworth, who didn't last the inning out. Johnny Sullivan drove home two runs with a two-bagger to left, and with the bases full Mickey Vernon slugged three more runs on a stinging double to left. The Nats' third two-bagger of the inning, by Cullenbine, scored the sixth run of the inning.

Wilson started to pitch his 6-1 lead away immediately. In the second inning, the Browns whacked his first four pitches for four straight singles and cut the Nats' lead to 6-3. In the third they knocked Wilson out of the box with a six-run inning of their own. Zuber took over and was greeted by Chartak's single that scored two runs. A bit later, Gutteridge doubled home two more and the Browns had a 9-6 lead.

Nats Tie Score

The Nats slugged away at Stan Ferens to tie the score at 9-9 in the fourth and take a 12-9 lead in the fifth. Estalella was the fourth-inning hero with his home run drive into the left field bleachers at a time when two were on, two were out, and two strikes on himself. In the fifth, Spence doubled against the left field wall and Vernon singled to left to get the runs home.

In the sixth, against Loy Hanning, the Nats upped their lead to 14-9. Zuber, of all people, got two runs home with a double to center.

And then the Browns started whittling his lead. Aided by Mickey Vernon's error, they got two runs back in the sixth, and in the eighth Zuber was taken out after he walked two men. Carrasquel relieved him and was no bargain. Clift doubled against the left field wall to score two runs, but Carrasquel got out of the inning when Clift tried to stretch his blow to a triple and was thrown out by Cullenbine. In the ninth, Carrasquel grabbed a grounder off McQuillin's bat to start a double play that kept his one-run lead safe.

a three-way tie with Heafner and Lloyd Mangrum at 131, collected his 267 with Sunday rounds of 70 and 66, while Smith fired a steady 66-67 to add to 134, giving them $650 each.

Five strokes behind Heafner came blazing Ben Hogan, who has pocketed better than $11,000 for this year's leading money efforts, Lloyd Mangrum of Monterey Park, Calif., and Gene Kunes of Philadelphia withwith two 69s.

Hogan, from Hershey, Pa., almost blew himself out of host Pete Wellman's annual tournament yesterday with a 71, three above par. But he zoomed back with 66-65 to make the best of it.

Mangrum led the field at the three-quarter mark with 198, one below the champ, but blew himself to a 71 on the final round. Kunes, whose worst 18 was his first one at 70, improved for 66, 66 and 67. Third place was worth $375 apiece, bringing Hogan's money making to $11,623.

A stroke behind at 270 were Dick Metz of River Forest, Ill.; Felix Serafin, Scranton, Pa., and Ray Hill of Hershey, Pa. The low amateur was Harry Offutt, St. Petersburg, Fla., who despite 75 on his final round wound up with 279.

Petersburg Evens Series With Senators

Lynchburg, Va., June 28 (AP).—Lefty Wood halted the Lynchburg Senators in the pinches today and Petersburg evened the four-game series at one-each with a 3-to-1 victory before a crowd of approximately 1200. The teams meet in a double-header Monday night.

Thirteen Senators were stranded on the bases as Wood bore down when the going was tough. He fanned nine.

The Rebels reached Junior Beard for single runs in each of the first three innings, but were kept under control after that.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

ARRIVES THE DELUGE! Only superlatives can properly outline Washington's night picture this week. It's a cloudburst of big names and embarrassment of riches. . . . Little Jack Little opens at El Patio this afternoon with his recently assembled quartet, including a petite girl singer. . . . Del Casino, who played a full year at Manhattan's exacting Hollywood, will bring his orchestra to Del Rio tomorrow. Here also you'll find new romancing interludes by singing violinist Janet Sloan and Accordionist Charles Gary . . . The Victory Room has just unveiled Georgie Ald's Band for the second time this season. And by popular request, no foolin.' . . . Down at the Neptune Room, come Saturday, there'll be the debut of something never seen before on land or sea, the "Keyboard Orchestra." . . . And at Burt's Trans-Lux, beginning today, you'll find Durward Boversox, whom many experts consider the finest rhythm violinist in the country. . . . Say, here's another. A flash from Jules James, owner of Restaurant "400," says that Opalita and Garcia, who've been singing and solovoxing at Palm Springs for the last six months, will open at "400" today. . . . How'll you decide where to go this week? Please ask us an easier one.

Bill Jordan of the famed piano team of Jordan and Kent dropped into the Mayfair lately, pronounced Dorothy Hutchson to be the best girl pianist he'd ever heard.

DANCING OVER HURDLES is the specialty of Richards and Carson, who head the new Casino Royal show, opening today. This seems to make them the highest steppers of the summer. Also in the new show are Kitty Voyle, South Seas dancer, hand-balancing Barry and Brenda and the Vee Ames Girls in freshly swingy numbers.

THINGS YOU SHOULD NOT KNOW. Les Colvin, minstrel of the Lounge Riviera, has a collection of rare books appraised at a couple of thousand dollars. But he dassent send any of them through the mails. . . . Bill Gibson of Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra is the best guitarist and lousiest golfer in this territory. . . . Russ Cullen, singing saxist of the Pall Mall Room, has been reading about society people giving parties in honor of horses. So Russ thinks he'll give a swank soiree in honor of his litter of baby pigs. . . . Why Eve Knight of the King Cole Room tells it we don't know, but she says she's 24 years old, weighs 135 pounds. She could subtract 20 per cent from both figures and everyone would believe her. . . . Maestro Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room has a standing offer of three times its purchase price for the motion picture camera he bought before the war. Because the darned thing has a German lens. . . . The urbane manager of the Plymouth is named Jack Darling!

Arlo and Collins, the Neptune Room's organ and novachord team, had birthdays on June 27 and 28. So they played "Happy Birthday" to each other on the midnight between their natal days. We wouldn't believe this either except that it's vouched for by press agent Frank Romer.

PREPAREDNESS IDEAS. The Balalaika's Russians are industriously rehearsing skits, songs and dofunnies for coming revues. Owner Mischa Bess wants to amass plenty of fall revue material so that his performance can take their late summer vacation as a complete rest, return ready to hop into a new show without rehearsal. (The Balalaika will remain open throughout July, then close until September 3). . . . The good looking young soldier you've seen at Crossroads every weekend is Sergt. Benny Bass, brother-in-law of Partner Eddie Smith. Benny's at Crossroads so regularly because he wants to keep in touch with night spot business so that he can enter it again after the war.

OF LISSOME LASSIES. Lotus' "Dancing Belles" look like the "Girl Friends of the Whirling Dervish" this week. Their red-and-white Turkish costumes are what you might call "harem-scarem." ('Scoose, plizz.) . . . Gloria Hope, new singer in the Mayflower Lounge, is proving more popular than a box of caramels at a kindergarten party. They say she already knows as many of the Lounge customers as Headwaiter Teddy. . . . Hi Hat's Marianne is looking like a futuristic sunset in a new formal of coral, green and canary colors. . . . Merry-Land's contralto torcherina, Alice Winstead, has psychic contagion as well as melody in her voice. When she sings "I'm In the Mood for Love," all the patrons get dreamy-eyed.

ORCHESTRAL ANGLES. Barnee has been at the Shoreham so long that there's a rumor he was born in the lobby. But there's no getting around the fact that the lightly effervescent Barnee-Lowe music is ideally adapted to the cosmopolitan nature of the Shoreham clientele . . . Somewhat similar in effect to the Barnee-Lowe music is that of Arthur Warren's band on the Starlight Roof. A party of Arthur Murray dance instructors were voluble the other eve in their praise of Warren's fine rumba rhythum . . . Down at River Bend you'll find a band that's given solid customer satisfaction for over six years. Its leader, George Stein, takes pride in knowing exactly what the patrons want, would sooner break an arm than miss playing a request . . . "Bayou means bounce" in the lexicon of Paul Perkins' Bayou Band, playing at the Log Tavern. This comparatively new unit is "on the beam," strictly.

EDIBLES WITH OOMPH. The "Homard a l'Americaine" at La Salle du Bois. The homard (it's lobster in case you don't remember your high school French) is gently and considerately stewed in 25-year-old cognac and sherry . . . The striped bass (we've always called it rockfish) at Olmstead's restaurant is nothing less than superb. Olmstead's clever chef knows enough to cook it without too much seasoning, preserve its fine and delicate flavor . . . A new kind of corn sticks, made with cracklin's, has made its debut at the Burlington.

IN MEMORIAM

ERRICO PASQUALE. In memory of my husband, PASQUALE ERRICO, who passed away two years ago today, June 29, 1940.
It is not the tears at the time that are shed,
That tell of the heart that is broken,
But silent tears in the after years
And remembrance fondly spoken
God knows how much I miss you.
PASQUALE
Never shall your memory fade
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where you are laid.
Your loving wife,
THERESA AND SONS.

A few things on the air today—specifically over Radio Station WJSV:

Molly and her famous Columbia network family, "The Goldbergs," are to be heard at a new time. It will be at 1:45 p. m. each weekday instead of at 2:45, the spot in which you've been hearing them since Heaven knows when.

"Pepper Young's Family," another widely known radio dramatic series, takes over the 2:45 period, also to be heard five days a week at that time.

Vaughn Monroe's Orchestra moves into the broadcast time formerly used by "Blondie" and the bumptious Bumsteads, the latter taking a vacation from the network until the fall. The time is 7:30 to 8 p. m.

"The Goldbergs" have been on the air for a mere 13 years and, needless to say, despite the change in time there will be no change in the format which seems to be doing pretty well. Mrs. Gertrude Berg, the author and director, continues in the leading role of Molly, while Jake, Sammy and Rosey are being played by the same actors who portrayed them on the opening broadcast in 1929.

On the other hand, "Pepper Young's Family" is a comparative newcomer to the air, having been heard for only ten years. Its cast, too, is virtually the same as that with which it started. The 'teen-age Pepper is played by Curtis Arnall. His long-suffering father and mother are played b Thomas Chalmers and Marion Barney.

The Post Radio Highlights

9:30 a. m., WINX—Ladies First has Kathryn Fleming with guest Mrs. William E. Leahy, acting chairman of the D. C. Chapter of the Motor Corps Red Cross; also she is the wife of the head of the Selective Service Board.

2:00 p. m., WMAL—N. E. A. convention presents distinguished educators in a round table discussion on the topic of "The Lost Legion."

7:30 p. m., WJSV—Vaughn Monroe's famed makers of music move into the spot vacated by "Blondie," while the Bumsteads vacation until the fall.

8:00 p. m., WRC—Cavalcade of America stars Helen Hayes as Julia Ward Howe in "The Hymn from the Night." Musical score directed by Don Vorhees.

9:00 p. m., WJSV—Screen Star Wallace Beery and Actress Majorie Rambeau are teamed in a radio adaptation of the movie, "The Bugle Sounds."

9:00 p. m., WRC—John Charles Thomas, ranking American baritone Metropolitan Opera, concert and musical comedy, stars on the "Telephone Hour." Mr. Thomas sings the Prologue from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" and "The Green-Eyed Dragon" by Charles.

10:30 p. m., WJSV—How the valiant Polish people continue to resist the Nazis who are ruthlessly trying to exterminate them is dramatized on C. B. S.'s "The Will to Freedom," the new series which tells how the spark of freedom still burns in the vanquished countries.

Bridge

On today's hand, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and C. E. Van Vleck almost bid a slam at hearts, but not quite. The slam was there due to East's singleton in diamonds, a vastly important singleton, as it meant that there were no losers in the suit with West holding the ace. Had East's minor-suit holdings been reversed, with two diamonds and one club instead of one diamond and two clubs, the slam, if bid, would have been defeated by a diamond opening lead. Nevertheless, the champions were disappointed at their failure to reach slam.

The adversaries were Mrs. A. M. Sobel and Mrs. Lottie Zetosch; the tournament was the recent South Shore open-pair championship held at the Half Moon Hotel, Coney Island, Brooklyn.

Zedtwitz and Van Vleck were playing the "Van Vleck system," recently renamed the "Victory system," which, fully explained, covers a poster-size sheet of paper and in this form has been sent out to tournament players so that they may better defend against it.

For our purposes today East's two-heart bid is not the standard forcing bid indicating a giant hand, but instead shows a weak hand with a long suit. Von Zedtwitz's response of two no trump was the strongest reply he could make. We assume the four no-trump bid was the Blackwood ace-naming convention; it certainly seems so from East's response of five clubs, which would indicate no ace. But from there neither partner dare try for six, and so the bidding was allowed to die at five hearts.

The opening lead was a low diamond, taken by dummy's ace. Trumps were cleared and the ace of clubs was knocked out; the rest of the tricks were conceded, as declarer could discard one losing spade on a high club and the balance of his cards were two spades for the ace and king, and hearts.

East made five hearts with an overtrick, losing the ace of clubs.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — One Woman (About To) Show — BY MILTON CANIFF

MERRILY AND I WOULDN'T HAVE A CHANCE WITH THOSE JAPANESE SAILORS—BUT THIS OFFICER LIVED IN THE UNITED STATES...HE IS PROUD OF HIS ENGLISH...I WONDER HOW LONG I CAN KEEP HIM FROM HARMING US...I'M SO TIRED...IT IS DIFFICULT TO THINK...
IT IS KNOWN THAT CHINESE GUERRILLAS ATTACKED OUR CONVOY...
MADAME SANDHURST, YOU ADMIT YOU AND YOUR DAUGHTER WERE LIVING AMONG THOSE GUERRILLAS! YOU SAW WHAT WENT ON! IF YOU DO NOT GIVE US INFORMATION—THEN I MUST USE FORCE...I AM SURE YOU WOULD NOT RELISH BEING TORTURED---OR SERVING AS ENTERTAINMENT FOR MY MEN...
I TOLD YOU I WAS WITH THE BAND OF A LEADER WHO WENT OUT OF HIS MIND... YOU SAW THE MAP ON WHICH HE SCRIBBLED HIS MAD DESIGNS...
YES, I HAVE THE MAP...
AND SPEAKING OF DRAWING... I WONDER IF YOUR DAUGHTER WOULD NOT ENJOY HAVING A BIT OF CRAYON WITH WHICH TO AMUSE HERSELF WHILE WE TALK...?

MILTON CANIFF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

THE SKY LOOKS SO STRANGE...I DO HOPE WE CAN GET HOME BEFORE THE STORM BREAKS!
YOU'RE RIGHT ABOUT THAT ROARIN' SOUND, MARY! ...IT AIN'T COMIN' FROM TH' MOTOR!
BILL! LOOK OVER THERE!
6-29-'42

MICKEY FINN — Still Clicking! — BY LANK LEONARD

MICKEY IS FOLLOWING THE LAST MAN TO LEAVE THE LITTLE TAILOR SHOP!
QUICK, VINNIE! UPTOWN!
OKAY!
HE GOT INTO A CHECKER CAB—HE CAN'T BE VERY FAR AHEAD OF US!
I SEE IT!

MR. AND MRS. — You Can't Blame Joe — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

JOE, PLEASE RUN BACK IN THE HOUSE AND GET ME A HANDKERCHIEF
GOSH, WE'RE LATE. WHERE ARE THEY?
JENNEY
OKAY
I DID JUST AS YOU SAID—I JUST GRABBED
JOE GREEN! IS THAT A HANDKERCHIEF?
WELL, THEY WERE ALL FOLDED FLAT. I COULDN'T TELL

DIXIE DUGAN — Loud Cry! — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

GUESS I'LL RIDE AROUND THE ESTATE, MA, AND TAKE STOCK OF WHAT'S OURS
ALL RIGHT, DEAR—I'M GOING TO STUDY THESE DIRECTIONS. I STILL HAVEN'T FIGURED OUT THIS MODERN EQUIPMENT
PA! HOW ARE THE HORSES?
I DUNNO! HAVEN'T HAD A CHANCE TO FIND OUT!
SUDDENLY A LOUD CRY BEHIND HER SENDS HER FLYING INTO THE LIMBS OF A NEARBY TREE!
CAAA

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Prodigal's Return — BY FRANK V. MARTINEK

QUIET! OUR SUPERIORS ARE WORSHIPPING AT THE SHRINE OF OUR WAR GODS
INSTANT INTERRUPTION IS NECESSARY, BROTHER
SPEAK! WHAT HAPPENS?
OUR MACHINE GUN LOOKOUTS HAVE SIGHTED THE MAN BRINGING OUTSIDE. THEY ARE INSTRUCTIONS
I UNDERSTAND, HONORED COMMANDER. WE WILL GIVE THE DOG A FITTING WELCOME, AS YOU ORDER!
GREETINGS, BENNER. WE'RE AIMING STRAIGHT AT YOUR HEART. JUST KEEP COMING.

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

EN ROUTE HOME—THE PILOT HAS MADE AN ALARMING COMMENT TO STEVE AND WAHOO!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY SAYING A YOUNG MAN IS KEEPING MINNIE-HA-CHA FROM GETTING LONESOME IN WASHINGTON?!
WELL, IT'S A LONG STORY, ROPER---
"-BUT THE DAY MINNIE WENT TO WORK IN THE SECRET SERVICE BUREAU, SHE MADE A WARM FRIEND AND A BITTER ENEMY!"
THIS IS MISS TEX CORRAL, PRINCESS! SHE WILL INTRODUCE YOU TO YOUR FELLOW WORKERS!
HOWDY, PODNER!
HMMPH!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

KING'S CALCULATIONS AS TO THE PROBABLE LOCATION OF THE BANK'S LOST MONEY LEAD HIM TO START HIS SEARCH IN THE WILDERNESS AROUND BALDY MOUNTAIN.
TALK ABOUT LOOKING FOR A NEEDLE IN A HAYSTACK!
THAT'S A CINCH, COMPARED TO FINDING A BRIEF-CASE FULL OF MONEY THROWN FROM A PLANE!
MOM, I FOUND ENOUGH MONEY T' PAD A MATTRESS!
MEANWHILE, A FEW MILES AWAY...
